NEW YORK (UPI) — The head of the Episcopal Church said today the first women priests to be ordained in the history of the ministry will not be allowed to work as priests because the four bishops who conducted the ceremony exceeded their authority.

The Rt. Rev. John M. Allin, presiding bishop of the 3.1 million member church, said in a statement the ordination of the 11 women in Philadelphia Monday "was contrary to the constitution and canons of the Episcopal Church."

"Any bishops involved in such a service have exceeded their authority, and have not acted for the whole church, as is the norm in ordinations. Accordingly the ordinations are irregular and may be found invalid. Under the canons, diocesan bishops are bound to restrict any deacons receiving such ordination from exercising priestly functions."

Bishop Allin said the ceremony "acutely adds grievous and burdensome problems" for the church.

The Rt. Rev. Ned Cole, bishop of Central New York, announced he had suspended Mrs. Betty Bone Schiess of Syracuse, N.Y., one of the 11 women ordained.

"In light of your proceeding to seek 'ordination' at the service held in Philadelphia July 29, I suspend you from the exercise of any ministerial action as a deacon in the Diocese of Central New York," the bishop said in a letter to Mrs. Schiess. "It is my opinion that the service whereby you and other deacons were 'ordained' as priests was irregular and contrary to the canons of the church."

In a statement issued during the ceremony, Bishop Lyman C. Ogilby of the Diocese of Pennsylvania, who refused to sanction the services, said those participating were "subjecting themselves to such appropriate action as may later be determined by the church."

Bishop Ogilby said the bishops, three of whom are retired, could face action "ranging from censure or suspension to deposition."

The ordination was performed by the Rt. Rev. Robert L. DeWitt, former bishop of Pennsylvania; the Rt. Rev. Edward R. Welles II, former bishop of West Missouri; the Rev. Daniel Corrigan, former head of Domestic Missions for the Church; and the Rt. Rev. Antonio Ramos, bishop of Costa Rica.

The two-hour service was punctuated by loud weeping, applause, cheering and shouts of "amen" as well as boos and catcalls when five priests in the audience rose to oppose the ordination.

"This is the last time you can be called bishops," said the Rev. George Rutler of Rosemont, Pa. "We are not gaining 11 priests, but we are losing four bishops."

The Rev. Charles Osborn, executive director of the American Church Union, said the "alleged ordination" was "theologically, ecclesiastically and canonically void."

McClory charges Nixon obstructed Judiciary panel

Wiggins claims article inconsistent with votes

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House Judiciary Committee today debated a third impeachment article, introduced by a Republican, which alleges that President Nixon "stonewalled" the panel by defying subpoenas for 147 White House tapes.

The article offered by Rep. Robert McClory, R-Ill., was the first impeachment proposal before the panel to be proposed by a GOP member.

"The prime example of 'stonewalling' is right here," McClory said in opening debate. "If we allow the President to do this we are telling future presidents what they can provide in their own impeachments. I hope we don't have any more, impeachments but in case we did, the precedents we establish here will be effective then. So it not only affects this president, but future presidents."

One of the President's staunchest defenders on the committee, Rep. Charles E. Wiggins, R-Calif., said that to impeach Nixon for not turning over evidence would be inconsistent with the panel's previous votes approving two articles based on the evidence.

McClory pointed out that the four subpoenas passed the committee with the "overwhelming and bipartisan support" of 33 or 34 of the panel's 38 members.

"We wanted to get all the evidence, that's something we had very little disagreement on," he said.

"The President told us he wanted to provide full cooperation with the committee," he said. "Where is that full cooperation?"

In opposing the article, Wiggins said: "The committee viewed the evidence and you found it overwhelming and now you seek to impeach him because he didn't give you the evidence you needed to do the job," he said. "Those who voted for the first two articles cannot have their cake and eat it too — this article is inconsistent. By your earlier votes you said the additional evidence was not necessary."

While the committee debate was in progress, several House Republicans circulated a so-called "Frey Plan" calling for Nixon to urge the Republicans to vote en masse for impeachment on the basis it would speed a Senate trial and allow his case to get a full hearing in a courtlike proceeding.

But Rep. Lou Frey, a moderate Florida Republican after whom the plan was named, quickly disavowed the proposal, stating it seemed logical to him five months ago when he first proposed it but it simply is "much too late for this kind of an approach now."

"There was some validity to it then," Frey said, "but now it's taken so long that the things I was worried about happening have happened. From my standpoint, it doesn't make sense now."

Rep. Harold Froelich, R-Wis., who voted for the two previous impeachment articles, opposed this one. He said, "the committee should have gone to the courts to see what the law is," adding that Nixon "used the courts all the way up."

Rep. Ray Thornton, D-Ark., proposed an amendment to the article, which was later adopted on a 24-14 vote, that the material Nixon refused to surrender could have resolved many of conflicts in evidence found by the committee.

Sirica plans to sentence Dean Friday

WASHINGTON (UPI) — John W. Dean III, the former White House counsel who became President Nixon's chief accuser and a key figure in the impeachment inquiry, will be sentenced Friday for his part in the Watergate cover-up.

A spokesman for the U.S. District Court announced today that Judge John J. Sirica would impose sentence on the 34-year-old Dean, who pleaded guilty Oct. 19 to a single count of conspiracy to obstruct justice.

He could receive as much as five years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

Carrasco offers hostage exchange for 5 officials

HUNTSVILLE, Tex. (UPI) — In the seventh day of his siege at the Texas State Penitentiary, Fred Gomez Carrasco today offered to release his 13 captives in return for five prison officials, who he said "are playing a poker game with the lives of these hostages."

Kathy Ann Pollard, 24, daughter of one of the hostages, had a telephone talk with the renegade convict and she said he discarded demands for additional weapons. But she said he was firm in his demands for bulletproof vests refused by prison officials.

"I want my mother out of there," said Miss Pollard, daughter of Novella Pollard, 46, a prison schoolteacher who has been held with the other hostages since the start of the takeover last Wednesday.

"If he doesn't get what he wants, he will kill them and make a blood bath out of this," she said.

The young woman, speaking in a calm voice with little emotion, said Carrasco told her he would exchange the hostages, including six women, for Texas prison Director W. J. Estelle, Warden Hal Husbands, Maj. Andrew J. Murdock, head of prison security, any other assistant director of the Texas Department of Corrections and any captain in the prison system.

It was Murdock who Carrasco claimed helped smuggle loaded .38-caliber revolvers into the prison in return for the payoff. Prison officials denied the charge.

Estelle said he was dubious of the newest Carrasco offer. He said the outlaw had reneged on the same offer at the beginning of the ordeal.

Prison officials said they knew of the offer Monday night but that Carrasco had not formally contacted negotiators about an exchange.

The spokesman also said all demands for guns, ammunition or bulletproof vests would be denied.

Priest dies in church fire

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 56-year-old man, released from police custody in Washington less than two weeks ago, was arrested early today on charges of setting a church fire that killed an elderly priest Monday night.

The suspect, Gordon Earl Marais, also was accused of setting minor blazes at two other Manhattan churches. According to police, he was crouching near a fourth church on West 42nd Street when he was arrested about 4:15 a.m.

Marais was later charged with arson "and related charges" in connection with the fires.

Police believe Marais is the man who telephoned United Press International and the New York Daily News Monday night and early this morning, identifying himself as "Zodiac" and vowing to set churches ablaze in a personal vendetta on the Roman Catholic Church.

Two of the fires were at Roman Catholic Churches and the third was at an Episcopal Church.

David Nozensky, a Secret Service spokesman, said a routine check revealed that Marais was wanted in California and the man was turned over to local District of Columbia police.

The metropolitan police today refused to comment on the case.

Why Marais was at large again Monday was unclear.

The Rev. Thomas Smith, 67, died of apparent smoke inhalation in the first blaze, a three-alarm fire which broke out at 9:51 p.m. in the century-old rectory of St. Vincent Ferrer Church at 65th Street and Lexington Avenue. Another priest and a firefighter were treated at a local hospital and released. Another 20 priests and friars were rescued.

Some 10 minutes after the fire was reported, an unidentified caller phoned UPI claiming responsibility for setting the blaze, and saying that he was "unleashing a tirade against the Catholic church."

The man said he was the "Zodiac" killer.

Federal sources doubted if the suspect had any connection with the West Coast "Zodiac" case in which some 10 persons were murdered by a man who had sporadic contact with the media.

In the second blaze Monday night, a man telephoned the Daily News at about 11:30 p.m., saying "This is Zodiac" and announcing he had set a small rubbish fire in the doorway of the Church of the Ascension Episcopal at Fifth Avenue and 10th Street, in Greenwich village. Three minutes later, a small fire on the steps of the church was reported.

At 3:55 a.m., a third fire was discovered smoldering on the roof of St. Mary's Roman Catholic Church, 145 W. 46th St. Minutes later, a Daily News reporter received another call from the man warning that another blaze would be set.

A radio alarm for Marais based on a description provided by the FBI was broadcast and two patrolmen spotted the suspect and placed him under arrest about 4:14 a.m.

Government grabs newspapers

Angry crowds protest Peru media takeover

LIMA (UPI) — Angry students roamed the streets near Lima today, setting fire to a bus and smashing bank windows during protests against the government takeover of Peru's major independent newspapers.

Hundreds of middle class Peruvians jumped in their cars and took to the streets in a horn-honking demonstration against the government, shouting "Elections!" and "Free Press!"

Among several dozen persons arrested were two cameramen working on assignment for UPITN Inc., an international newsfilm company associated with United Press International. They were Jane Berger, 28, and Derek Furlong, 33. They were seized early today.

Police fired tear gas and warning shots to disperse the bands of students. The number of arrests was not known. Police used high-powered hoses the day before to break up a group of 300 screaming demonstrators.

Hours earlier, President Juan Velasco rode smiling through the streets in an open Cadillac under a shower of confetti to celebrate the 153rd anniversary of Peruvian independence.

Soviet made tanks rumbled behind in formation, symbolizing Velasco's attempts since coming to power five and a half years ago to reduce Peru's dependence on the United States.

The protests came two days after Velasco ordered helmeted soldiers with machine guns to seize control of the capital's six independent newspapers.

Portugal reports 645 cholera cases

LISBON (UPI) — The government said Monday 645 confirmed cases of cholera were reported throughout Portugal in the past three months. The report said 18 people died of the disease.

Between July 19 and 25, there were 104 confirmed cholera cases, mainly in the Lisbon and Porto areas. Seven persons died in the same period.

A government statement said a team from the World Health Organization has visited the affected areas "and approved the measures taken to treat and prevent the disease. No country has yet been infected by cholera imported from Portugal," the government said.

Break in weather by week's end, but in the meantime . . .

The weatherman promises a slight improvement in the weather toward the end of the week, but through Wednesday the situation will be a combination of heat, humidity, smog and sunshine.

Light showers were forecast today near mountain areas, but no local rainfall is expected. Light sprinkles were reported Monday afternoon in Pomona, Diamond Bar, Montclair and Ontario but no measurable rainfall was recorded.

West End communities of the valley suffered through another smoggy day Monday. Health advisories were called there Monday and again today. The high smog reading in the West End was .27 parts per million in Upland and .21 ppm in Chino. Los Angeles Air Pollution District recorded .17 ppm smog levels in Pomona Monday and levels today were expected to be below .20 ppm.

Weather forecaster Wilbur Shighihara said there will be some variable high cloudiness today and Wednesday in valley communities but otherwise the weather will be sunny, hazy and slightly cooler. The "slightly cooler" is very slight—meaning two degrees cooler than Monday's high of 94 degrees.

The humidity level in the valley will again be about 10 per cent above normal, all caused by a flow of subtropical moist air from the southeast. The system has caused daily thunderstorm activity in the deserts and other areas for more than a week. Scattered showers were also reported Monday in the mountains.

ILLNESS FREES HOSTAGE

Two unidentified prison inmates remove Alline House, 61, from the prison library in Huntsville, Tex. Mrs. House, one of the hostages held by Fred

Mental patient probably going to Atascadero

The 15-year-old mental patient at Pomona's Pacific State Hospital who killed an older patient there July 20 is likely to be confined eventually at Atascadero State Hospital, authorities said Monday.

The teen-ager attacked a 22-year-old hospital patient in a play area of the hospital, pounding his head on the asphalt and inflicting fatal injuries. The victim, Thomas Neal Harker, 22, died later at Pomona Valley Community Hospital.

Police said the youth also attacked a patient in the hospital last April. They said he has an IQ of only 23.

Investigators have filed a petition in behalf of the teen-ager with the probation department. They said he will be processed through Juvenile Court and later the psychiatric division of Superior Court in order to have him committed to a facility of the Department of Mental Hygiene, such as Atascadero, which has maximum security.

Rider loses control of cycle, is injured

A motorcyclist was injured Monday afternoon when he lost control of the machine and jumped off on Kingsley Avenue west of Mountain Avenue, Pomona, police reported.

Frank M. Giannette, 33, of Spring, Tex., was taken to Pomona Valley Community Hospital where he was released after treatment of abrasions. Police said he was unfamiliar with the motorcycle, which belonged to a Pomona man, and lost control of it when

Nixon conservative backers asked to seek his removal

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former anti-poverty director Howard Phillips today called on President Nixon's conservative supporters to work for his impeachment and removal from office.

Phillips, a political activist with close ties to conservatives in Congress, said Nixon has repeatedly lied to his supporters by furthering liberal causes and is unworthy of their trust.

"Conservatives have long provided Richard Nixon with his most dependable support," Phillips said in a prepared statement.

"It is appropriate that we should now play the decisive part in requiring his departure from public life."

Phillips, who worked for dismantlement of the Office of Economic Opportunity while he was its director, said he planned in the next two weeks to announce formation of a group to be called Conservatives for Removal of the President.

He said the new group would work to convince conservatives in Congress and around the country that Nixon should be impeached and convicted by the Senate.

Phillips said that Nixon had betrayed conservatives who supported him in his 1972 reelection by approving legislation backed by liberals in order to gain their favor.

May cost governor's seat

Alabama's No. 1 lawman bemoans Las Vegas luck

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Alabama Attorney General William J. Baxley, considered a likely gubernatorial candidate in 1978, sounded Monday like a man who wished he had never chosen Las Vegas for a vacation.

Baxley came home $32,000 richer from the blackjack tables, but he conceded Monday he may have to use the money to find another job.

Baxley apparently has been stung already by public reaction to the news that he labored over the tables for three days and at one point reportedly had won his winnings to $90,000 before the casino management asked him to shift to another game.

The 33-year-old attorney general was not so lucky at baccarat and had lost his winnings down to about $32,000 when he cashed in.

Baxley said he was not a hypocrite about his gambling. "I've never tried to hide anything I did," he said.

But he conceded he already had received some unfavorable comment on his gambling for high stakes.

"The only thing I've got to say ... I've brought it on myself," he said.

Baxley said repeatedly he wished the gambling trip could be forgotten. He seemed to feel the reaction would worsen if the subject were reshaped.

The young bachelor was riding a wave of popularity before the news of his winning streak leaked out.

He escaped opposition in the Democratic primary as he seeks re-election in the November general election. And Time magazine recently listed Baxley as one of only two Alabamians among 200 nationally who could be expected to provide leadership in the future.

Baxley refused to run for governor this year, saying he never would oppose Gov. George C. Wallace. But Wallace cannot seek another term in 1978 and Baxley has been considered a frontrunner in that race.

In murder trial

Motion by defense loses

The defense failed Monday in its attempt to have statements made by Ronny Willis Michael, 27, ruled inadmissible during his Pomona Superior Court trial on two murder counts.

Judge Glenn M. Pfau denied the motion of Deputy Public Defender Clark Shacklett after almost two days of testimony outside the presence of the jury.

The statements were made by Michael, a Covina maintenance man, when he voluntarily submitted to a lie detector test at the sheriff's crime lab Feb. 15, authorities said. They testified during the hearing last Friday that while taking the test, Michael admitted killing the victims, Connie Gail Michael, 28, his estranged wife, and Wayne Douglas Beach, 28, her companion.

The two were slain in Beach's home at 1612 S. White Ave., Pomona, on Feb. 12.

Hearings deal with campaign financing

Public financing of political campaigns will be discussed at public hearings today and Wednesday at the State Building in Los Angeles.

Assemblyman Jim Keysor, D-41st Dist., chairman of the Assembly's elections and reapportionment committee, called the sessions. "California needs public financing of political campaigns if the momentum created by Proposition 9 is to be sustained," he explained.

The meetings start at 9 a.m. in Room 1138 of the State Building, located at 107 S. Broadway. Those to testify include Assemblyman March Fong, former Assemblyman Jesse Unruh, presented the opening prosecution statement Monday afternoon after the jury was allowed to return to the courtroom following Judge Pfau's ruling.

Testimony began this morning as a deputy medical examiner was called to explain what killed Mrs. Michael and Beach.

and Michael Walsh, California's chairman for Common Cause.

"Our new disclosure laws have confirmed what we have suspected all along," said Keysor. "Incumbents spend far more than challengers and those challengers who do run for office are likely to be either rich or well known."

The most successful candidates depend on contributions over $500 and the contributors who can afford to make them, he added. "Over time, these contributors begin to expect a greater return from government than they have invested in their candidates. This is the situation we hope public financing will change."

Franco leaves hospital for long convalescence

MADRID (UPI) — Generalissimo Francisco Franco left the hospital Tuesday to start what medical sources said would be a long convalescence from a circulatory ailment that forced him to hand over his powers temporarily as chief of state to Prince Juan Carlos.

Supported on either side by doctors, the frail-looking 81-year-old leader was helped into a limousine, then smiled faintly and waved to a crowd of well-wishers that applauded and shouted, "Francisco Franco!"

Doctors said Franco, whose normal weight is about 125 pounds, lost 10 pounds since entering the hospital, three weeks ago for treatment for thrombo-phlebitis, a sometimes fatal inflammation of veins in the legs. His condition was complicated at one time by intestinal bleeding.

His doctors said Franco was leaving the hospital "in full recovery" but not yet cured.

While completing his recovery, Franco will be facing a host of political problems, many of them connected with the crisis brought on by his sudden illness.

One problem, sources close to the government said, was if and when to take back his powers from Juan Carlos, 36, his hand-picked successor. Persons connected with the prince's advisors said he was exercising little more than purely ceremonial functions and was not overly happy with the situation.

Franco was driven from the hospital to his El Pardo palace residence north of Madrid. Members of his family said he would spend about a week there before traveling to his customary summer retreat in Galicia, his native land in northwestern Spain, where he will convalesce.

Franco's doctors said he will eventually recover his full physical and mental powers, but medical sources said his recovery would be long and not without perils.

The danger, they said, is that a blood clot from his inflamed thigh could work itself loose and enter the heart or lungs, blocking vital arteries and causing death.

Panic in New Delhi as earthquake rocks area

NEW DELHI (UPI) — A strong earthquake rocked areas of southwestern Asia Tuesday and sent panic-stricken residents running into the streets of this Indian capital.

Walls of large office buildings cracked in New Delhi but there were no reports of casualties.

Nor were there any immediate casualty reports from other parts of the Indian subcontinent or neighboring countries. But the area where the quake was centered was remote and sparsely populated.

There were varying reports on the location of the epicenter and the strength of the quake.

The Indian Meteorological Department said it started at 10:45 a.m. (1:15 A.M. EDT) in the Hindukush Mountains between Pakistan and Afghanistan and tremors lasted for 15 minutes. The department said the intensity of the earthquake measured between 6 and 6.5 on the Richter scale.

According to the department, the epicenter was 600 miles north-northwest of New Delhi in an area populated by Pushtu tribesmen.

Radio Pakistan said an earthquake of moderate intensity rocked the northeast Pakistan cities of Rawalpindi, Lahore, Lyallpur and Multan early Tuesday. The report made no mention of casualties or damage.

The Royal Observatory in Hong Kong said the quake was recorded at 2:20 p.m. (1:20 a.m. EDT) and had an estimated magnitude of 7.4 on the Richter scale.

In Tokyo, the meteorological agency said the quake was believed centered on the Sino-Pakistan border.

In 1935, an earthquake centered near Quetta, Pakistan, killed an estimated 60,000 persons and another quake in northern Afghanistan in June, 1956, killed 2,000 persons.

The Alaska earthquake on March 27, 1964, measured 8.4 on the Richter scale. Casualties included 68 persons killed. An earthquake in Peru on May 31, 1970, measured 7.75 on the Richter scale and killed at least 30,000 persons.

Senate begins to take notice: it may have to try President

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the first time since impeachment proceedings began, the Senate has formally acknowledged it may have to put President Nixon on trial.

In both houses of Congress tentative steps gingerly were being taken toward the possibility of unprecedented television coverage on their respective floors during impeachment proceedings.

Neither house has allowed its floor proceedings to be televised in the past.

At the request of its Republican and Democratic leaders, the Senate swiftly adopted a resolution Monday ordering its Rules Committee to begin studying rules and procedures that would apply to a Senate trial if the House impeaches the President.

It told the committee to report by Sept. 1—earlier if requested by the leaders—with recommendations whether any changes in the rules should be made.

The House Rules Committee begins considering today a proposal by 85 members which would—if adopted by the House itself—open that body's impeachment debate to television coverage.

Senate Majority leader Mike Mansfield said the Senate Rules Committee also will be asked to consider the possibility of television coverage, but he believes it should be very limited—the cameras should only be allowed to focus on the area of the Senate floor where the defense, the prosecution and witnesses would sit.

He would not let them pan about the chamber to focus on senators at their desks.

The final ruling on that and other rules would be up to the full Senate.

House Speaker Carl Albert said Monday he hoped the full House would begin debating impeachment in the second week of August.

House leaders have set aside the period of Aug. 12-23 for debate and are considering limiting the argument to a total of 60 to 100 hours.

The timetable would allow a House decision before Labor Day—Sept. 2—on whether to send the impeachment issue to the Senate for trial.

The Senate's request for a Rules Committee study emerged from a meeting Monday attended by Mansfield, Senate GOP leader Hugh Scott, who apparently backed the television proposal, assistant GOP leader Robert P. Griffin, and assistant Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd.

Though there earlier had been considerable back-stage discussion and research in the Senate on the subject of impeachment, it was not until Monday that Senate leaders began the actual process leading to a possible trial.

Before the House Judiciary Committee voted Saturday to recommend Nixon's impeachment, Mansfield had said any such Senate steps would be premature. But he said Monday: "In view of the fact that the House Judiciary Committee has approved an article of impeachment, we feel we have no choice but to be anticipatory."

"The Senate is passing no judgment," he added. "But there is no justification for delay."

Palestinian guerrillas, Lebanon rightists battle

By United Press International

Palestinian guerrillas using mortars, rockets and grenades battled on the outskirts of Beirut today with Lebanese rightists demanding an end to commando control over refugee camps.

Witnesses said fresh fighting broke out at dawn in the suburb of Dikwaneh after a night of guerrilla-rightist clashes in which at least three persons were injured. The fighting continued through the morning.

Lebanese army and police units were sent to the area, located near the Tel El-Zaatar refugee camp, in an effort to contain the violence, the witnesses said.

One guerrilla was killed and a rightist was seriously wounded last Saturday in clashes between the commandos and members of Lebanon's Phalangist political party.

The Phalangists claim guerrilla control over Palestinian refugee camps violates Lebanon's sovereignty. The party wants the camps to be brought under supervision of Lebanese security forces.

In Washington, Secretary of State

Henry A. Kissinger planned to meet today with Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon in the first of a series of discussions on the Middle East situation.

The Allon talks were the first in a planned series of discussions with all parties to the Middle East dispute.

During August Kissinger is to meet with Jordanian Premier Zaid Al-Rizzi, Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy and a Syrian representative.

In Tel Aviv, Israel warned of a possible new Middle East war this year and raised the threat of a first strike if the Arabs set the stage for a conflict.

Lt. Gen. Mordechai Gur, Israel's military commander, said Monday "the question of whether there will be war by the end of the summer is bothering us."

The Israeli chief of staff warned of possible confrontation if the Arabs "demand or create a situation in which the U.N. will leave the area."

He said Israel would then be "face to face" with Egyptian and Syrian armies, with both sides claiming the Golan Heights and Sinai Desert buffer zones.

Court of Appeals in 1968, suffers from a heart condition. He was assigned to the prison's comprehensive health care unit.

Warden Lawrence G. Grossman said, "We are primarily interested in taking care of his medical problems." He said Kerner earlier had written him that he wished to get involved in prison activities, however, and not just sit in his cell.

Kerner's prison caseworker, Mary Moldestad, 31, said, "I don't see his stay here as a rehabilitative thing. Considering he's been around all these years and stayed out of prison."

"He's accountable for whatever he's done," she added, "but what we do for him depends. It's clear he's not a master criminal."

Kerner, the first federal judge ever convicted of a crime while on the bench, resigned last week. He had continued to draw his $42,500 annual salary for 14 months after his conviction.

Young Kennedy hurt

NAIROBI (UPI) — Robert Kennedy Jr., 20, banged up his knee when he slipped on some rocks while trying to sneak past a rogue elephant on the slopes of Mount Kenya.

He was taken to a local doctor for treatment and hobbled around on crutches for a couple of days.

"But I'm all right now," he said Monday. "It was nothing at all. I'm just taking it easy."

Kennedy has been in Kenya filming a television wildlife series for viewing in the United States.

Force Reinecke to resign? Younger is researching it

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke has vowed to stay in office despite his perjury conviction, but the state attorney general says research is under way to determine if he will have to be forced to step down.

A formal opinion will be issued within a week, Attorney General Evelle Younger said Monday.

In Washington, Reinecke said, "I have no intention of resigning unless it's necessary under state law."

Reinecke, who was preparing to return to Sacramento, said he would not take a leave of absence while his case is being appealed, a process that may take up to a year.

He met Monday with James R. Pace, chief probation officer for the U.S. District Court in Washington. No restrictions have been placed on Reinecke's movements except that he may not leave the country.

Reinecke was convicted Saturday for lying to the Senate Judiciary Committee in the ITT investigation. He appealed the Washington, D.C., jury verdict and sentencing has been set for Aug. 30.

Younger told a Beverly Hills news conference Monday he will render the opinion within a week.

He said he was asked by Gov. Ronald Reagan Monday to render an opinion in the case but said the law covering removal of state officers is somewhat hazy.

The attorney general said his office has reached a "tentative conclusion" but is withholding a final opinion pending further research.

Al Gordon, an aide to Younger, said Reinecke apparently will remain in office and collect $96 a day in salary until he is sentenced.

Gordon stressed his remarks were not Younger's formal opinion, but only "our idea of what the Constitution and state laws say about officeholders who are felons."

The state government code specifies that any officeholder is disqualified by conviction of a felony. However, Gordon said the code declares an office shall not be vacated until the officeholder is sentenced.

In a statement issued in Sacramento, Reinecke said he talked with Younger by telephone Monday and requested "him to study the legal aspects of the situation—pointing out to him that we will appeal this federal decision."

"I am still totally dedicated to proving my innocence in a court of law and I have complete confidence that justice will eventually be served," Reinecke said.

Kissinger asked to intervene

By United Press International

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger intervened today in the Cyprus peace talks in Geneva at request of British Foreign Secretary James A. Callaghan in an effort to break a deadlock holding up final agreement between Greece and Turkey, conference officials said.

They had hoped to reach agreement today but apparently a new snag developed as it has before in the crucial talks.

Conference sources said the British, Greek and Turkish foreign ministers were nearing an agreement despite a continuing Turkish buildup and a hardline by Turkish Premier Bulent Ecevit.

The sources said Callaghan telephoned Kissinger during a recess and that Kissinger agreed and telephoned Ecevit to ask him to take a more moderate position.

There were these other major Cyprus developments:

—In Istanbul, Ecevit rejected a Greek demand its troops withdraw to the July 22 Cyprus cease-fire line and said he could not predict the outcome of the Geneva peace talks. He said he had appealed to U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim by telephone today to help secure the release of Turkish Cypriots rounded up by the Greeks.

—On Cyprus, Turkish troops landed more men and material, pushed toward Greek Cypriot territory with a regiment backed by armor and artillery and ordered U.N. patrols off the roads in their area. Cyprus Vice President Rauf Denktaş called for a rescue operation by the Turkish army for the thousands of Turkish Cypriots held by the Greeks.

—Viktor Minin, head of the Soviet Foreign Ministry's Middle East desk, flew to Geneva today to match the observer presence of the United States at the Cyprus peace talks. Washington sent William Bufum, assistant Secretary of State for International Organization Affairs, to Geneva when the talks began last Thursday.

'Godfather' will appear on TV

NEW YORK (UPI) — NBC will show "The Godfather," on two nights this November, and has agreed to pay Paramount Pictures a record $10 million for the privilege, it was announced Monday.

NBC did not disclose the two air dates for the highly successful film about the Mafia. The film stars Marlon Brando, who won an Academy Award for his performance as the Godfather, as well as Al Pacino and James Caan.

Earlier this year, NBC paid MGM $5 million to show "Gone With the Wind." "It's the highest price ever paid for a movie to be shown on television," a spokesman for Paramount said after confirming the $10 million figure.

Farr sentenced to five days in jail in feud with judge

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Reporter William Farr, central figure in one of longest and most celebrated U.S. press-judiciary clashes, was sentenced to the maximum five days in jail and fined $500 Monday by Superior Court Judge Charles Older.

Older lamented that he could not make the sentence harsher.

The judge, passing sentence, said that "No man has the right to hold himself above the law and that is precisely what Mr. Farr is doing in this case. Mr. Farr will not be rewarded for his conduct in this court."

"In my view, the circumstances of this case warranted a much more severe sentence, were it within the power of the court to impose it," the judge said. Farr and Older have been involved for three years in a struggle that pits a right of judges—to impose gag orders to protect the impartiality of jurors—against a journalistic ethic—that a newsman must refuse to reveal the identities of those who give him information in confidence.

Farr has refused throughout that time to reveal the names of two lawyers who broke Older's gag order by giving Farr information for a story during the trial of the Charles Manson family for the Sharon Tate murders.

Older originally sent Farr to jail on an open-ended contempt sentence, ordering that he be held until he relented. The sentence could have lasted until one of the men died, or until Older left the bench, but Farr was freed in 1972 after 46 days by U.S. Supreme Court Judge William O. Douglas pending appeals.

A complex series of appeals and hearings established that Older could not impose an open-ended "coercive" contempt sentence on Farr, but was limited to the five days maximum as a "punitive" sentence.

Farr remained free on appeal.

"I am greatly relieved that my virtual life sentence has been reduced to five days," he said outside the courtroom. "I am fully prepared to go back to jail."

Farr is now a court reporter for the Los Angeles Times, but was working for the Herald-Examiner when he wrote that the Manson family had plans to kill other celebrities.

Interest rates to stay high

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal Reserve Chairman Arthur F. Burns today ruled out any slackening of current high interest rates until "the fires of inflation burn themselves out."

Burns, in a strong defense of federal reserve monetary policy, said that tight money and credit is necessary along with a reduction of federal spending and other measures to bring the country out of its double digit inflation.

Carrying the same message to Congress was President Nixon's outgoing economic council chairman, Herbert L. Stein. Burns testified before the House Banking Committee and Stein appeared before the House-Senate Joint Economic Committee.

Burns' renewal of his opposition to any change in the Fed's tight money policy came as Vice President Gerald R. Ford expressed concern about the current record high interest rates and said he hoped the Fed "will not be too tough too long."

Burns said the Fed would continue its tight money policies "long enough to let the fires of inflation burn themselves out."

Burns said the appropriate course for monetary policy "is the middle ground." He said present monetary policy had resulted in a growth rate of about 6 per cent over the past year in the money supply, which he said "is still too high for the stability of average prices over the longer term."

"But moderation in the growth rate of money and credit supplies must be achieved gradually to avoid upsetting effects on the real economy," Burns testified.

"A return to price stability will require a national commitment to fight inflation this year and in the years to come," he said. "Monetary policy must play a key role in this endeavor and we in the federal reserve recognize that fact."

"We are determined to reduce over time the rate of monetary and credit expansion to a pace consistent with a stable price level."

Burns said the process of cutting the federal budget must begin now and that Congress must resist any temptation to cut taxes or create new public works programs.

In testimony before Congress' Joint Economic Committee, Stein said the inflation battle may be longer and harder than expected, partly because of what he said was failure of everyone to appreciate the intensity that tends to feed on itself.

He said the rates of increase in food and oil prices were abating, and that this would lead to a lower rate of inflation later in the year.

"But it must be admitted that prices, outside the food and fuel areas spurted more than many, including us, expected and our estimate of the inflation rate at the end of 1974 is higher than it once was, although we continue to believe it will be significantly lower than in the first half of the year," Stein said.

Flanagan said, "I even have a breakfast scheduled and paid for that I am giving to her."

Response to Nixon

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Sen. Lloyd M. Bentsen Jr., a Texas Democrat who admits presidential aspirations, has been picked to appear on national television Wednesday to answer President Nixon's speech on the economy.

Bentsen said Monday Nixon is to blame for the country's inflation and only Congress can keep the United States from tumbling into a recession.

"The President is trying to blame the Congress (charging) budget busting," Bentsen said. "If you take all of the budgets submitted by this President since he's been in office the Congress has cut his budgets."

Bentsen said Nixon proposed the country's first $200 billion budget and its first $300 billion budget.

Wasn't his fault

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Actor Robert Conrad, claiming he was an unwilling participant in a barroom brawl last Friday, says he doesn't need that kind of publicity.

"I've already got a gunfighter image as a result of 'Wild, Wild West,'" said Conrad Monday, referring to a television series in which he starred.

"All I want to do now is live quietly and enjoy my kids," Conrad said he was not responsible for the injuries to William Boyd, 31, who had come to the Library Lounge in the Hilton Hotel to play Santa Claus at a "Christmas in July" party.

Boyd suffered a broken jaw, cracked ribs and a dislocated shoulder in the fight that followed.

Gary Njirich, an official of Caruth C. Byrd Productions, told UPI he was the person who inflicted Boyd's injuries.

Conrad said the only person he struck was an unidentified man who knocked him to the floor.

No charges have been filed in the accident.

Lindbergh hospitalized

NEW YORK (UPI) — Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., the first man to cross the Atlantic Ocean alone in an airplane, was in Columbia Presbyterian Hospital today with an undisclosed illness.

The hospital would not say why the 72-year-old flier was admitted or what his condition was, but Lindbergh canceled a scheduled appearance Sunday at the Midwestern Governor's Conference in Minneapolis, Minn., reportedly because of the flu.

Puts 'butt' in his campaign

By United Press International OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Gary G. Gage of Clarkston figures it is time for big government to "butt out."

To emphasize the point, Gage, a Republican, brought a goat with him Monday when he filed for the fifth congressional seat now held by Democrat Tom Foley.

"The goat's main purpose in the campaign will be to 'defoliate' the fifth district," Gage said.

By United Press International Powerful thunderstorms roamed the Eastern Seaboard Monday night, toppling trees and power lines.

Tornadoes were sighted in Pennsylvania and Texas.

Winds of up to 60 miles per hour whipped North Collins, N.Y., golf ball-sized hail pelted Olean, and 3/4-inch hail pinged Niagara Falls and Batavia.

Three persons were injured when a storm ripped through a camping area in Sheridan Bay Park at Sheridan, N.Y., uprooting a number of large trees. One huge tree crashed into a car and camping trailer.

In Silver Bay, N.Y., winds sent trees crashing into the main dormitory of a summer camp, injuring two persons.

A possible tornado was reported in New York's Erie County, where it leveled several barns and knocked down trees and power lines.

A tornado dipped down at an intersection in the tiny southwestern Pennsylvania community of Bealsville Monday, causing an estimated $17,000 damage to six homes and one business.

That storm also knocked out power to the area and downed several trees.

Wind damage also was reported at South McKeesport, Pa., and the Maryland communities of Hagerstown, Berwyn and Cheverly.

A nother twister swirled through the North Texas town of Vernon Monday, tearing roofs from houses, shattering windows in a rest home and leaving one elderly resident of the convalescent home injured—though not seriously. Steubenville, Ohio, and Wheeling, W. Va., each got an inch of rain in 10 minutes when the storm was at its full fury. Walnut-sized hail also pelted the area.

An isolated thunderstorm dropped walnut-sized hail on Jacksonville, Ark., Monday night.

The storms which swept the upper Ohio Valley and eastern seaboard lumbered out to sea today.

Thunderstorms were scattered along the northern and middle Atlantic Coast today, through the southern Plains and from the northern Rockies to the southern Plateau.

Light rain fell in sections of the Great Lakes region. However, fair weather prevailed over much of the nation.

Temperatures early today ranged from 48 at Bismarck and Grand Forks, N.D., to 96 degrees at Needles, Calif.

Mama Cass choked to death on sandwich, says autopsy

LONDON (UPI) — An autopsy showed today that American singer Mama Cass Elliott did not die of a heart attack but probably choked to death on a ham sandwich she was eating while propped up in bed watching television. Further laboratory tests were ordered to make sure.

An inquest into the death — mandatory when it is not from natural causes — will open at Westminster Coroner's Court Wednesday for the formal purpose of identifying the 31-year-old star who became internationally famous with the Mamas and Papas rock group.

The inquest will then be adjourned to await the result of the laboratory tests.

British officials said the autopsy established that the 5-foot, 5-inch 238-pound former flower child did not die of a heart attack and an official source said, "We think she choked. The laboratory tests will make the cause of death certain."

Miss Elliott, who gained recognition in the 1960s as the biggest "mama" of the Mamas and the Papas, died Monday when she took a bedtime sandwich break from one of her frequent crash diets.

Dot MacLeod, her English

secretary, went to the apartment during the evening when Miss Cass failed to answer a telephone call. She reported finding the body slumped on a divan bed.

The secretary said the bedroom television set was on. She said a bottle of soda pop and a ham sandwich were on a bedside table.

The twice-divorced singer had been dead "for a considerable time before her body was found." He said she had seemed in good health.

Authorities took the body to the Westminster Coroner's Court for the autopsy. There were no immediate funeral plans.

The doctor said Miss Elliott had "been doing very well" with her latest diet. The 5-foot, 5-inch singer recently reported shedding 80 pounds in the past year, reducing her weight to 238 pounds.

American singer Joe Croyle, 25, apparently the last person to see her alive, said he visited Miss Elliott Sunday night and she seemed in good spirits.

She completed a successful two-week engagement at the London Palladium Saturday night and her manager, Alan Carr, said, "This last week was the happiest I have ever seen her."

Born Ellen Naomi Cohen on

Feb. 19, 1943, in Arlington, Va., she won fame as Mama Cass after joining Denny Doherty, Michelle Gilliam and John Phillips to form the Mamas and the Papas in 1965.

Miss Elliott left the group in 1968 after the Mamas and the Papas produced such gold records as "Monday, Monday" and "California Dreamin'."

During her solo night club, television and recording career, she had such single hits as "Dream a Little Dream of Me" and "Make Your Own Kind of Music."

She tried unsuccessfully to shed her old image and even made an album entitled, "Don't Call Me Mama Cass Anymore." But for her fans, she remained Mama Cass.

Miss Elliott had a daughter during her marriage to musician Jim Hendricks. The child — Owen Vanessa, 7, — lives with the singer's mother, Bess Cohen, in Baltimore, Md.

The marriage to Hendricks broke up in 1969. She married and divorced West German Baron Donald Von Weidenman in 1972.

"My fortune was always one step ahead of me," she once said. "Everywhere I went, they'd say, 'Listen, your fortune just left.'"

SINGER DEAD—American pop star Mama Cass Elliott was found dead in her London hotel suite Monday. An autopsy showed Miss Elliott probably died from choking on a sandwich she was eating in bed.

L.A. county methadone clinic ordered closed

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A county methadone clinic, which treats heroin addicts by giving them daily doses of the substitute drug, has been ordered closed Sept. 1 because it violated dosage limits and has faulty security.

"They've been dosing them the way they wanted to without any documentation," Gary Foster, a spokesman for the state Health Department, said Monday in explaining the order closing the Southeast Methadone Maintenance Clinic.

The facility is one of eight county-run methadone clinics. The whole county program has been under attack by state officials for alleged rules violations.

Supervisor Pete Schabarum has said the county program is in a "state of chaos."

Methadone is an addictive drug used to treat heroin addicts but is strictly regulated by the state. The substitute drug is used to help addicts free themselves of craving for heroin. It satisfies the physical need without providing the pleasurable sensations of heroin.

Addicts at the county's eight clinics, which treat 633 patients, are given their daily dose of methadone mixed in orange juice.

They are required to drink the dosage on the spot, unless they get doctors' approval to take it home.

At the Southeast center, however, 91 of its 97 patients were allowed to take the methadone home and a random review of 18 revealed only one had the necessary documentation of approval, the state Health Department said. The clinic safe, which contains methadone worth approximately $10,000 to $20,000 on the street, was also found by the Health Department to have an inadequate alarm system.

Dr. Thomas L. Grubbs, county drug abuse director, admitted the county program is "a mess," but criticized the order closing the clinic.

He called the state action "inappropriate" because it would send the clinic's patients to more distant clinics that are also inadequately staffed.

The county central methadone office said nearly all of the county's clinics are understaffed of nurses and other personnel and at least three don't have a full-time doctor as required by state law.

Incidents have been reported in past months at some clinics involving fighting by patients and personnel being arrested on charges of assault and selling stolen property.

Chrysler earnings go down by 85.9%

DETROIT (UPI) — The Chrysler Corp. Monday reported worldwide earnings during the first six months of this year fell 85.9 per cent from the record figures of a year ago.

Lynn Townsend, chairman of the smallest of the "Big Three" automakers, and President John Riccardo said Chrysler's earnings of $29.4 million for the first six months this year, compared with a record $198.4 million last year, reflected the difficult economic conditions for the auto industry worldwide.

General Motors, the industry giant, announced last Friday its first-half earnings dropped almost 74 per cent to $426 million from the comparable 1973 period—the lowest earnings for the period in 16 years.

Ford Motor Co., the other member of the big three, will issue its first half report Wednesday.

Chrysler said sales for the first half of 1974 totaled $5.7 billion, down 5.8 per cent from $6.1 billion a year ago. Sales in the second quarter totaled $3 billion, a decline of $290 million or 8.3 per cent from $3.2 billion a year ago.

Earnings during the second quarter by Chrysler this year were $27.8 million, down 75.6 per cent from the profit figures in 1973.

"The combination of depressed sales volumes and the extraordinary cost increases resulting from general inflation and shortages of basic materials make it increasingly difficult to earn an adequate profit," the two top Chrysler executives said in a statement.

Union oil profits up 94.5% over last year

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Union Oil Co. made almost twice as much money in the first half of this year as it did in the same period last year.

The company announced Monday its profits had increased $4.5 per cent from $40.2 million to $79.4 million. Earnings per share increased from $2.34 to $4.42.

President Fred Hartley said increased international activity and the rise in crude oil prices were the main factors in the increase.

Hartley noted that the company's costs are rising with profits. The capital outlay budget, originally planned at $500 million for the year — an increase of $100 million from last year — has already been increased by another $200 million to $700 million, he said.

"Already in 1974 we have spent $175 million in bonuses to the U.S. government just for the right to explore for oil and gas on federal offshore leases," Hartley said. Such huge payments to the government siphon off the money needed "to spend on actual search and development efforts," he said.

"But WHY wouldn't Jimmy make a good husband, Mom? He's kind, considerate and likes TV dinners!"

Tragic results

Methadone abuse cited in report

NEW YORK (UPI) — About 60 per cent of a group of young drug users here were found to have used methadone purchased in a black market, according to a report by New York City's Addiction Services Agency (ASA).

The report, commissioned by the ASA and prepared by the Center for New York City Affairs by the New School for Social Research, was based on a survey among 476 young offenders at the Riker's Island remand shelter for youths during the summer and winter of last year.

Methadone is a synthetic form of morphine that is being used increasingly across the country for the daily treatment of heroin addicts who want to "go straight."

By substituting the highly-addictive drug for heroin and then steadily increasing the dose, the addict finds he cannot get high from shooting heroin. And by maintaining himself on a constant level once a high tolerance has been achieved, the patient does not get high on the methadone, either.

But, when abused, methadone can get a drug user very high.

A recent UPI investigation found many patients on methadone maintenance programs in New York City able to manipulate their doses and take less than is prescribed. Thus they can make do on three or four prescribed doses a week and sell the "take-home" doses they don't use.

Such "diversion," as the trafficking is called, accounted for more than 500 methadone-related deaths in the city last year, exceeding heroin's death toll for the first time.

The diversion problem, however, soon may be solved. The President's special action office for drug abuse in Washington is funding a series of pilot programs around the country for a new drug called l-alpha-acetyl-methadol.

LAAM is a longer-acting drug which can be administered only three times a week instead of seven, thus eliminating takehome doses.

In addition, AM, which drug treatment officials in New York say has "an excellent safety record," also may eliminate some of methadone's unpleasant side effects, such as excessive sweating, drowsiness, impotence and constipation.

But until the new long-acting drug is proved effective and made available to all programs, the deadly diversion is likely to continue.

Son building memorial for his father's work

By JOHN WORRALL
London Financial Times-UPI

NAIROBI — An inspired young East African anthropologist, Richard Leakey, is building a monument in Nairobi to prehistoric man.

It is also a memorial to the young man's famous father, the late Dr. Louis Leakey, whose discoveries suggest East Africa was the cradle of humanity.

Richard Leakey, 30, is director of the National Museums of Kenya. He is enshrining the name and work of his father in the $720,000 Louis Leakey Memorial Institute for African Prehistory, soon to take shape in Nairobi as an international center for anthropological study and research.

The institute will be a final graveyard of prehistoric man. It is to be the repository of a huge, unique and ever-growing collection of fossils and artifacts illustrating the emergence of man millions of years ago from his ancestors, the southern apes, up the long and still not properly understood ladder of evolution.

Dr. Louis Leakey died in London in 1972, his work on East African prehistory unfinished. His discoveries, with his wife, Dr. Mary Leakey, at Olduvai Gorge, Tanzania, shook the scientific world in the 1950s and 1960s. Among them was the find, of the earthly remains of the first maker of stone tools.

Olduvai Gorge is a 25-mile-long canyon, where the Leakeys discovered layer upon layer of ancient lake shores containing evidence of human occupation, including the continuous evolution of stone tools, from crude pebble tools to the more sophisticated implements of final stone-age man.

Scientists poured into East Africa, new sites were opened up and fascinating new discoveries were made. Louis Leakey's big nucleus collection of priceless fossils and artifacts was housed in the Kenya National Museum. The collection grew rapidly as new specimens came in.

Louis Leakey set up a Center for Prehistory and Palaeontology in 1962 at the museum to meet the fossil crisis. As more scientists came to Kenya to examine material, as new expeditions were organized, the modest facilities of the center were extended and the crisis of palaeontological plenty hit the museum.

One vast and increasing source of prehistoric material of enormous value to science is the annual expedition, headed by Richard Leakey himself, to remote Lake Rudolph in Kenya, where important new evidence of man's origins is being discovered in new fossil sites.

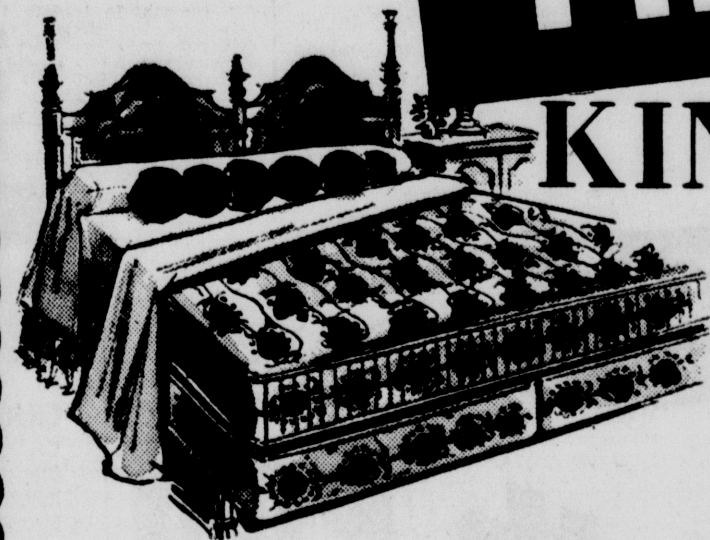

After discussions with leading scientists in America, Britain, France, Germany, Spain, Holland, Canada and South Africa, Richard Leakey committed himself to build the Louis Leakey Institute of Prehistory. He has the full support of the Kenya Government.

Richard Leakey has already raised about $456,000 for the building in cash and pledges.

Report from America

Buddy Brown likes to take life easy

YAUPON BEACH, N.C. (UPI) — In this coastal resort area lives a man who lends money to friends, doesn't worry, doesn't get in a hurry and doesn't work on Sunday.

He's Buddy Brown, 66, and he's satisfied with his life as a parttime handyman and fisherman.

Brown has not moved more than a mile in more than 35 years. For a while he lived beneath the bridge crossing the intracoastal waterway, warmed at night by a pet billy goat and dog sleeping at his sides.

Then he was "chief cook and bottle washer" on a fishing barge that traveled the waterway from Carolina to Florida.

Now Brown lives in the first house on the right across the bridge with his wife, "Miss Emma."

He repairs lawnmowers, outboard motors and bicycles, mends fishing nets and does a little shrimping. To get around, he rides a bicycle or gets "rides from friends."

The last car he owned he finally "parked it for two or three years and then sold the motor."

"It was too much trouble to mess with and I didn't need no car," he said.

Brown's monthly bill for electricity runs between $6 and $7.

"I hardly ever burn a light over 30 minutes," he said. "It keeps the bills small."

His day begins as early as 3 a.m. and ends before 8 p.m.

"Anyone come to see me after eight, there's no one here," he said, packing tobacco in his pipe. "I just work 'til I can't see and I quit. We don't burn lights at night."

Mending fishing nets and shrimping was once his sole business. But things have begun to change. Fishing nets are no longer made of cotton but of nylon, which is harder to break and harder to fix, Brown said.

When shrimping season opens in late June, Brown will once again head into the waters he has shrimped and fished all his life, but his catch will be more expensive this year.

"I've been selling shrimp for 50 cents a pound all these years," he said. "But I just heard that they're selling for $3 a pound. I don't believe I'll be selling any more for 50 cents."

The Browns keep a goat, a dog and a duck, and tend a small vegetable garden behind their house. Miss Emma freezes or cans the garden products for the winter.

Brown now deposits his money in a nearby bank, but at one time he kept his money in tin cans buried around the house.

Beach residents said he always had money to lend to his friends. One grocer said he could identify the money by its rust marks.

"But, you know, only one person ever paid me back," Brown said.

"I get a whole lot out of life," he said pausing from his work.

"I don't have no problems.

L. M. Boyd 20 deluxe spittoons

When President Andrew Jackson bought 20 deluxe spittoons at $12.50 each for the White House, he was criticized mightily. This was a personal extravagance, said his detractors. He just wanted to gussy up the place for the 1832 wedding of his niece Mary Eastin to Lucius J. Polk. However, one Jackson defender explained that every president who enters the White House has great expectations, and no impeachment proceedings were instigated.

TWICE as many women as men use tranquilizers. Or so the surveytakers say. Also noteworthy, they say, is the predictable fact that the greatest users are mothers of numerous small children.

WHY ARE long lemons juicier than round lemons?

FIRST CHILD

Q. "How long is it on the average after the couple gets married that their first child is born?"

A. About a year and a half. That's among brides and grooms over age 18.

IT'S SAID no other human interest story is as universally printed in newspapers worldwide as the typical tale of the family cat that found its way home from hundreds of miles away. Said yarn reportedly has been front-paged in the dailies of just about every language.

WHEREABOUTS of the world's busiest nudist resort remains in contention. Some credit Rose Lawn, Ind., with that distinction. As many as 9,000 clients some days are said to show up to show all on that 386 acres.

SAINT BERNARD

The Saint Bernard dog of the Alps was pretty nifty in the rescue of lost climbers. That's widely known. But how could it see in those blinding blizzards? And how could it follow a scent over new-fallen snow? So inquires a client. It couldn't. Not well, anyway. It relied on its ears, mostly. That dog's hearing is sensitive beyond belief.

STARGAZERS insist the Sagittarian tends to have a green thumb.

IT WAS NOT widely publicized during World War II that as many Frenchmen volunteered for the German Waffen SS as joined the Fighting Free French division.

THOSE FISHERMEN, who bury the fishhook in the bait so the fish can't see the barb, err. No fish can recognize a fishhook. Besides, an exposed point snags better. Such is the claim of an experienced angler. Will you buy it?

The doctor comments

Reader needs help with balanced diet

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB—I am now able to recognize that I have a serious obsession about gaining weight for probably a multitude of reasons. I read your column about the side effects and disadvantages in not eating properly (loss of muscles, sex drive and ability, and personality changes). I am experiencing these effects now to a serious degree. I have been eating improperly for seven years and look back and see the unpleasant changes that have taken place. I'm 23, married, five feet tall and weigh 87 pounds.

Could you tell me where I could find a diet that is more importantly centered around good, balanced nutrition rather than the diets with pork, lamb (which I can't eat due to a nervous stomach), milk shakes and egg nogs to just put on weight? I know I would inevitably put on some weight by beginning to eat. I want to get on a balanced eating plan that will help me to discipline myself and supply me with the vitamins my body must badly need at this point.

I have gotten myself into a serious state of poor health and am very eager to put my every effort into a good healthy eating plan. I sincerely hope your answer will be something more than "just eat."

DEAR READER — You need to learn something about nutrition. For a start, write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1531, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019 and ask for the booklet on Balanced Diet. Send 50 cents to cover costs.

A proper diet includes all the necessary amounts of vitamins and minerals, plus sufficient complete proteins. That usually means a quart of milk (fortified skim milk or its equivalent is great). Adequate amounts of meat, poultry and fish for complete protein (a quart of milk plus seven ounces, weighed raw, of any of these items each day will meet your protein requirement). Then you need vegetables, fruit and cereal. Study the booklet to see which ones give you the needed vitamins.

Then a balanced diet must have enough calories. If you don't eat enough calories the protein in your diet will be used for energy and not to develop a good healthy body by forming muscles, replacing blood cells, enzymes, hormones and other vital substances and structures for good health. A calorie-deficient diet can lead to a protein deficiency. That is why starved people lose their muscles.

Next you will need to start an exercise program to regain your muscle mass. You see, when you starve you lose muscle tissue and your muscles may stay small even when you go back to eating a normal diet, unless you are active enough to work your muscles and to stimulate them to grow.

A muscle grows because you put it under load as in lifting a weight. It grows strong enough to lift the weight easily. Then if you increase the weight it grows some more. The bigger the muscle the more weight it can lift and the more you lift the bigger the muscle. A number of calisthenic-type of exercises are wonderful for this purpose, including push ups, knee bends, raising up on your toes, and if you like, a reasonable weight-training program. When you regain your muscular strength you will have more energy. Your posture will be better and you will have less trouble preventing obesity or developing fat deposits later. Let me know how you make out with your program.

Dr. Lamb welcomes questions from his readers, but because of the volume of mail he cannot answer personally. Questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns. Write to Dr. Lamb in care of The Progress-Bulletin, P.O. Box 1531, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Almanac

Lightning is caused by an excessive positive charge on the ground and an excessive negative charge in a thunderstorm cloud. The World Almanac notes. In the United States, the West Coast has the fewest thunderstorms — less than 10 a year — while Florida is buffeted by more than 100 storms yearly. An average of 150 Americans are killed each year by thunderstorms.

Cultural Arts Commission gets new lease on life

By TONY NAVARRO
P-B Staff Writer

The two-year-old Pomona Cultural Arts Commission, faced with possible extinction, was given a new lease on life by the City Council Monday night.

Councilmen voted 5-0 to continue that citizens' advisory body and to place it under the Parks and Recreation Department's sphere of influence.

Thus, for the first time since its creation, the seven-member commission will have a specific city department assigned to it.

The commission was created by city ordinance in March of 1972 and organized in June of that year to promote the arts and coordinate cultural activities.

But among the city's advisory bodies, the Cultural Arts Commission has been something of an orphan, not really belonging to any department and therefore deprived of the kinds of city staff assistance received by the other groups.

To strengthen the city's involvement in the cultural arts area, reorganization changes were proposed both by the commission and the city staff.

One of the proposals suggested by City Administrator Jerrold Gonce was to do away with the commission and transfer its workings to a Cultural Fine Arts Advisory Committee which would fall under the Parks and Recreation Commission, to be renamed the Cultural-Fine Arts Commission.

The Parks and Recreation Department would have become the Department of Cultural Arts-Leisure Activities, and would have become the umbrella agency for activities broader in scope.

A proposal advanced by the commission called for the hiring of a cultural fine arts director who would serve as city hall's liaison officer with the commission.

However, Monday's council action was in keeping with another proposal from Gonce.

A part-time arts director is included in a proposed budget for the commission considered by the council Monday night.

However, the council asked that the budget first be reviewed by the commission and be returned at a later date for council action.

THEY'RE VORACIOUS EATERS

It's difficult to count a handful of ladybugs, especially when they're hungry for aphids and have been trapped inside a container for a short time. The Claremont Parks Department received 614 gallons of the little spotted insects last week and began planting them in trees and shrubbery. The city gained nationwide exposure on television and in magazines a couple years ago when it decided to use the ladybugs to combat the aphid infestation in the celebrated elms.

THEY'RE LOOSE AGAIN

Curt Lance of the tree division of the Claremont Parks and Recreation Department climbs the city's 55-foot boom truck to plant 500,000 ladybugs in Shamel ash and white alders, the trees most badly hit by aphids. Parks department Supt. Tom Taylor said the little aphids eaters are planted at night, when the air is cool and the ladybugs don't fly. Taylor said that the attempt last year to stop the aphids' attack on the trees by using the lacewing larvae failed because of ants.

City councilmen freeze police incentive program

By MAE TATE
P-B Staff Writer

The City Council upheld the recommendation of the city staff Monday night by freezing the educational incentive program in the Montclair Police Department.

The council unanimously concurred in the decision at the end of an impasse hearing on a salary and benefit package for the Montclair Police Officers Association during 1974-75.

In addition to eliminating the five per cent bonus for an associate of arts degree and 7½ per cent bonus for a bachelor degree for new policemen, the council asked that a revision of the educational program be studied for implementation in 1975-76, granted a 10 per cent cost of living increase, and ordered continued study on disability retirement and sick leave-vacation conversion.

The police group declared the impasse in negotiations on July 15 after police and city management could not reach agreement on the freezing of the educational program for future employees.

Greg Caldwell, president of the Montclair Police Officers Association, and Tom Mauk, assistant city administrator, presented their arguments to a subdued council.

The police corporal reiterated his belief that freezing the program would be a "step backward for the department, citizens and city." He added, "There is a need for a program which rewards an individual for educational advancement." Education is a means of making an officer more politically, socially and economically aware, he said.

"The question is one of whether in fact a cash program motivates an officer to go to school and then to use that education on the street. If money is the motivation to get an education, its additional application will be limited," Mauk replied.

Caldwell retorted that officers "don't want to work with clowns. Education takes some of the game-playing and circus out of police work. In police work you don't get that many 'atta boys'; and five per cent to me is an 'atta boy.'"

"It's a $12,300 'atta boy program," answered Mauk, "and if it were working it might be worth it, but it's not. Motivation for good job performance is not an 'atta boy program. It's inner motivation of the individual himself."

Many of the persons supporting the program were former police officers who had gotten degrees and moved into the ranks of attorneys, judges and other professionals.

Ken Ziebarth, Municipal Court judge who said he was speaking as a private citizen, voiced concern with the morale of the department. He claimed the Montclair council had adopted an educational plan for officers while he was a member of the council.

Police Chief Ray McLean disputed this claim, saying the 1971 program was the first and only educational incentive program for Montclair.

"I wish that speaker had been more perceptive as a council member and a program would have been established," said McLean.

The chief added that he had originally supported the plan, but was "no longer an advocate of the system that we now have. It is fraught with inequities and is not doing the job it is supposed to be doing. It's a question of effectiveness."

Other speakers included Detective Jim Bailey, Patrolman Guy Eisenbrey, Deputy Dist. Atty. Tom Spivey and Jack Chandler.

Councilman Tom McClure voiced ire about the use of such terms as "clowns" for officers without degrees and the emphasis on education and liberal thinking being synonymous.

"Would you stand before this political body and urge the continuation of a program that is no good? Our responsibility says we cannot continue a program that is not meeting the goals," said McClure.

Councilmen Ernest Rowley and Paul Jones and Mayor Harold Hayes agreed there was a need for revision of the present program.

Park committee gets approval of talent shows

The Sharkie Park Committee won City Council permission Monday night to hold youth talent shows at the Pomona park.

A second request from the committee for permission to sell corn on the cob and lemonade on Sundays as a means to raise funds for neighborhood projects was withdrawn.

Tentative dates for the talent shows are Aug. 4 and 18, and Sept. 1, 2, 15 and 16.

In his recommendation to the council for approval, Parks and Recreation Director Jack Hoxsey asked that amplified musical instruments be toned down so that residential areas around the park would not be unreasonably disturbed.

In a letter to the council, Vince Carpio, committee co-chairman, said the programs were being staged to "help alleviate some of the pressures and tensions on (members of the community) who have no real means of Sunday entertainment."

Carpio said the committee would provide its own security and clean-up crews.

Mayor Ray J. Lepore commended the committee for the success it's enjoyed in organizing other activities in the park in the past.

30 families prepare for French students

Thirty Claremont families are prepared to be hosts to 30 French students who will be studying American life at Claremont High during the month of August.

Teachers Bill and Penny Herman and Mike Slovik, who are coordinating the program, expect the visitors to arrive at Los Angeles International Airport Thursday aboard a chartered flight.

The visitors, who all speak English, will be used to Claremont High where they will be welcomed by their hosts.

The visit is being sponsored through the Foreign Study League, a subsidiary of Readers Digest Foundation. The students are paying their own way.

The French visitors range in age from 15 to 26, and all reportedly have had four years of English in school.

The month-long stay and study in Claremont resulted from a call to Claremont High by Bob Anastasia, regional coordinator for Foreign Study League. Mrs. Herman, who teaches French at Claremont High, took on the project, enlisted the help of her husband Bill, English teacher at Azusa High, and Mike Slovik, Claremont High teacher.

They began putting together a program which calls for studying every weekday morning except Tuesday, and excursions in the afternoons.

The group will fly back to Paris Aug. 31.

Tuesday all-day trips include sightseeing in Los Angeles, Universal Studios, Marineland, and Disneyland.

This Friday the group will rest in the morning and receive orientation in the afternoon.

The host families will take them to Corona del Mar for a welcome party.

Study will start next Monday morning at Claremont High with a discussion on French and American stereotypes, a study of the valley's geography, and films.

Study Wednesday will center on discussion of America through its media. Films screened will include "Hollywood: The Dream Factory."

Fourth concert of summer set by concert band

An open-air program of band music will be presented by the Pomona Concert Band at its fourth concert of the summer season Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Ganesha Park bandshell.

Under the direction of Stanton Selby, the Pomona band will perform the concert march "Ensemble of England," the overture to "Pique Dame," and selections from "Carousel."

Also included in the program will be the marches "Hail Detroit," "Our Director," and "Marche Militaire Francaise," and the selections "Serenata," "Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," "In A Persian Market," and "Italian Festival."

Heartline is a service for senior citizens. Its purpose is to answer questions—fast. It costs you nothing. Call Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. or write Heartline, 8514 North Main St., Dayton, Ohio, 45415. Remember, Heartline pays for all calls on its toll-free number . . . 800-543-2393.

Heartline: Is it possible for me to get a private room in a nursing home and have Medicare pay for it? R. K.

Answer: If you are in the nursing home for skilled nursing care, for medical reasons (not custodial), and if the nursing home has a private room, and if your condition requires the privacy of a private room, Medicare might pay. This is decided on a claim-to-claim basis by your Medicare carrier. Check on page 10 of your Medicare handbook for more details. We might add that usually Medicare will only pay the charges of a semi-private room in the hospital or nursing home.

Heartline: A friend of mine said that Heartline is located here in Philadelphia. I say Washington, D.C. Who's right? P. A.

Answer: Heartline is located in Dayton, Ohio. We feel however, that you are both right with Heartline.

Heartline: I love some of the old radio shows that they are broadcasting now. Why don't they have more of them? K. A.

Answer: The more you listen to these shows, the more shows they will broadcast, if you let your local radio station know how much you enjoy them. Give them a call.

Heartline: If I take out a health and accident policy through a private company, will it affect my Medicare coverage? O. R.

Answer: No. Medicare pays the same no matter how many private insurance policies you have. Be sure to choose carefully.

Newspaper recycling off to a slow start

The first week of operation of the City of Pomona's "Ben Recycl-Ed" newspaper recovery program netted only 2½ tons of newspapers, city hall reported.

"We have gotten off to a slower start than expected but these things take quite a while to get into full swing," commented Terry Conner, coordinator of the city-wide project.

"As more people become aware of the program and what it can do in their very own neighborhoods, I'm sure that we will be getting a larger participation."

The problem is set up for separate collection of newspapers on the same days as regular trash collection day.

Citizens are asked to put out their papers, either in a paper sack or bundled with string, next to their trash cans.

Two city employees manning the city's orange and blue "Ben Recycl-Ed" truck collect the newspapers each morning and the papers are sold directly to Recycling Resources of Pomona.

Revenue from the newspaper program is put into a special fund and set aside to aid the funding of special neighborhood projects.

Further information may be obtained by calling 620-2364.

Drama heightens
as America waits

Even if the accelerating impeachment drama had abruptly ended with the Supreme Court's decision regarding the right of President Richard M. Nixon to withhold evidence from the Special Watergate Prosecutor — and of course it could not and it has not — the effect on the country would still be eminently salutary.

The unanimous pronouncement by the Court reaffirms that this is a nation of laws, not men — that even the most exalted of Americans, the President, is subject to the law, even in his official capacity as chief executive.

So great is the respect of Americans for the Court as an institution, whether or not they always agree with it, so plainly and directly did it speak to the issues in this case, and so well does its decision fill a void that had existed in Constitutional law, that there cannot be the slightest doubt that the final word has been spoken.

Yet as important as the opinion may be as one more weight inexorably tipping the balance in the direction of the impeachment of Richard M. Nixon — like all major Supreme Court decisions — this one will remain as a legal landmark long after the passions of time have cooled.

For the first time in this history of the Republic, the court addressed the question of the executive privilege. In 31 pages of unadorned, less-than-ringing language, Chief Justice Warren Burger laid down the guidelines that will likely stand as long as the Republic itself. They bear study by Americans wholly aside from their connection with Watergate.

Recognizing that, although executive privilege is not mentioned in the Constitution, "it is fundamental to the operation of the government and inextricably rooted in the separation of powers under the Constitution," Burger nevertheless pointed out the doctrine's limits:

"The President's need for complete candor and objectivity from advisers calls for great deference from the courts. However, when the privilege depends solely on the broad, undifferentiated claim of public interest in the confidentiality of such conversation, a confrontation with other values arises," he said.

These other values involve "The very integrity of the judicial system and public confidence in the system (which) depend on full disclosure of all the facts, within the framework of the rules of evidence."

Thus, said Burger in the key sentence in the opinion, "The general assertion of privilege must yield to the demonstrated specific need for evidence in a pending criminal trial."

There it is, if ever again the nation finds itself in a Watergate-type situation (one hopes not for at least another century). The guidelines both rule out unwarranted invasions of presidential confidentiality by Congress and spell out the conditions under which that confidentiality must bow to the needs of justice.

As for Watergate, the influence of the decision can only be speculated about, but scarcely exaggerated. Since it is virtually a foregone conclusion that the House Judiciary Committee will recommend the adoption of articles of impeachment — the only area of doubt being how many Republicans on the committee would follow, it is in the House of Representatives itself as it considers the Judiciary Committee's recommendation that the consequences of the decision will be felt.

President Nixon earlier indicated that he would make available to the Judiciary Committee the same material subpoenaed by Special Watergate Prosecutor Leon Jaworski, if the court ruled against him. That pledge surely extends to the full House.

If the President delays unreasonably, or if some of the tapes are not forthcoming or have gaps, or if the conversations on them are as damaging to the President's defense as those already released, a house vote for impeachment would seem to be almost a certainty.

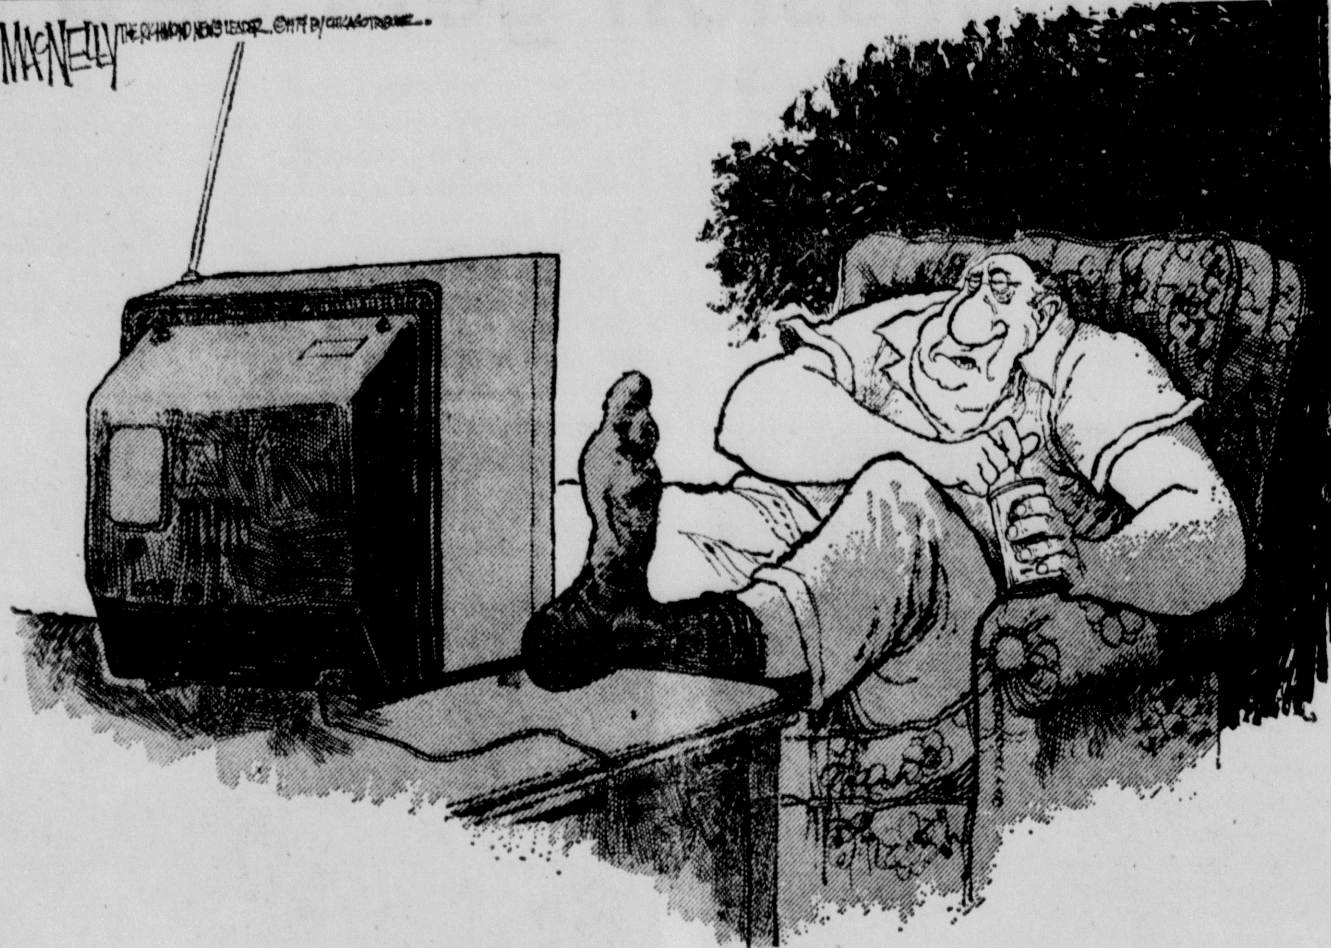

Maybe there's hope

Patrons of a bar in Manhattan jumped two gunmen who were holding up the place the other day and shot both of them with their own weapons, killing one and critically wounding the other.

It was the second time in less than a week that witnesses to an armed robbery in New York City had turned on the culprits and disarmed them. In the other incident, two witnesses to the holdup of a drugstore at Kennedy International Airport in which the pharmacist was shot and killed chased the gunman, tackled him and held him until police arrived.

Now this sort of volunteer citizen law enforcement is definitely not recommended as a general rule. The police welcome all the help they can get but they prefer it in the form of more officers and better equipment — and witnesses who remain alive and are willing to testify against criminals.

Still, it's an encouraging development. If the worm is turning in the city where 34 apartment dwellers watched the murder of Kitty Genovese 10 years ago, and not one called the police because he "didn't want to get involved," maybe there's hope for all of us.

THEN SHUT UP AND IMPEACH HIM! ... IT'S ALMOST TIME FOR 'KOJAK'...

THE PUBLIC FORUM

FDA not reconsidering fluoride

Jack Anderson's column published in the Progress-Bulletin July 18 reported that the Federal Food and Drug Administration "has taken some careful, tentative steps to reconsider Fluoridation." Representatives of the American Dental Association have contacted the FDA and officials there have confirmed that there are no such plans.

Innumerable studies have shown that fluoride in water supplies at the recommended level has no harmful effect on humans but, rather, has a positive effect on their dental health. Millions of people nationwide and throughout the world, where the drinking water contains natural fluorides, have consistently lower rates of tooth decay.

Extensive research among these individuals confirms the safety of fluoride in water supplies. There is no difference between natural Fluoride and that which is added. Fluoride has been one of the most widely studied public health measures—there is no question but that Fluoride in the proper concentration is beneficial and without negative side effects.

At a time when extensive debate is underway on National Health Insurance as a means of providing health care for the public, it is inconceivable to trained health professionals that a basic, simple, and relatively inexpensive health measure such as Fluoride is not mandated legislatively.—William F. Schiefer, D.D.S., president, California Dental Association.

Hickel's report on recreation needs

WASHINGTON — One of Interior Secretary Walter Hickel's last acts before he was unceremoniously sacked by President Nixon in 1970 was to lay down an elaborate blueprint for the nation's recreation needs through the year 2000.

Unknown to all but a few White House aides, Hickel and his predecessor, Stewart Udall, had spent $7 million to produce the two-inch-thick volume.

The suppressed report is important to every American, whether his favorite recreation is to join the 150 million annual picnickers or the 1.5 million mountain climbers.

In exhaustive detail, Hickel and Udall laid out where future national parks should be and selected sites for federal seashores, monuments and forests.

Using complicated formulas, they estimated the cost of keeping fish in the streams, game in the woodlands, pure sand on the beaches and the splash of the wild in America's increasingly tamed and polluted rivers.

Extraordinary pains were taken to balance the needs of the poor, the handicapped and the aged with those of ordinary family vacationers.

It would cost a staggering $42 billion, the suppressed report estimates, to begin to meet the nation's future recreational needs. Enormous though this figure may be, it is slightly less than what it cost to run the Vietnam War for two years. The report suggests the cost should be shared by federal, state and local governments.

On July 17, 1970, Hickel submitted the oversized volume to President Nixon, with a ringing appeal that "Americans cannot and will not tolerate the continued blight and destruction of their land and waters . . . I present to you," offered Hickel, "a major step forward."

But Hickel's big step, like a footprint on the sands of the sea, washed out. The White House crowd took one look at the $42 billion price tag and quietly pigeonholed the study.

In its place, the President later issued an 89-page report, distinguished only by its spectacular color photos and its expensive glossy paper. This slick production, typical of the public relations that has characterized the Nixon Administration, was more impressive in form than substance. Its most memorable feature was the title, "A Legacy for America."

The public was never supposed to see the original study that they had paid $7 million to produce. Its offset plates, ready for printing, were hidden away for four years in a white cardboard box in an Interior Department cubbyhole.

But a few weeks ago, Senate Interior Chairman Henry Jackson, D-Wash., learned about the report's existence and won the Interior Department's approval to extricate it from its hiding place. He is now preparing to turn the suppressed study over to the public printer for belated publication.

In a confidential memo, he has charged that the Administration's failure to print the report "represents the retreat from the challenging task which lies ahead of us." He is making the report available, without specifically supporting all its findings, so the American people can "intelligently and conscientiously assess the needs."

From one of the original numbered copies, here are highlights from the study:

—The greatest recreational needs, according to the study, are in these areas: New York-Newark, Chicago, Philadelphia-Camden, Washington-Baltimore, Boston-Providence, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Denver, Minneapolis-St. Paul, New Orleans and Buffalo. Help for these cities alone would benefit 96 million people.

—The report recommends that the Pentagon give up numerous forts, fields, and other facilities, totaling thousands of acres, to be converted into public playgrounds. Other federal land, it suggests, can also be used for recreation.

—The report calls for reversing the trend toward urban sprawl. Polluters of water, land and air should be prosecuted. Communities should get federal technical help to zone out ugliness.

—Private recreation developers should be encouraged, with limited subsidies for state and local recreation, all under close federal supervision.

—The report states that picnicking and pleasure driving are the most popular forms of recreation today but predicts that by the year 2000, it will be swimming. The most recreation-minded people, says the report, are Westerners.

—The study offers detailed proposals for several major projects. For example, one project would make it possible for visitors to Washington to travel along the Potomac River as part of their visit. As the report portrays it, the "Potomac National River would consist of several thousand acres of some of the finest scenic landscapes in the East — forests, agricultural and pastoral lands, shores, bluffs and river islands. It would form an added green belt . . . for Harpers Ferry, Antietam and the C & O Canal."

—Similar federal development would take place on the sugar-sanded islands off the Florida and Mississippi coasts, some of Georgia's Sea Islands, the Great Prairie Lakes, the Virginia barrier islands and the Ten Thousand islands of Florida.

Just in jest

I grew up in an era when houses didn't have antennas — when dinner was served at noon and supper at night — when a 5 cent piece was called a "jitney" and if a kid had a couple of them in his pocket, he was fabulously rich. It was an age when few men (and for that matter, few women) had ever experienced the joy of singing in the bathroom. How could they when the bathroom was a galvanized tub in the kitchen on Saturday night?

But few if any of us old coots are looking for sympathy because of those disadvantages we suffered. Actually, we were the fortunate ones, for we grew up in an environment which provided us with the world's most ideal setting for experiencing supreme tranquility. Whenever we felt the need for perfect peace, we had only to saunter down the well worn path to the four-holer with its star, crescent, catalogue and emergency corncocks, and there, in complete isolation, forget the troubles of the world as we swatted flies and listened contentedly to the buzzing of the bees in the honeysuckle vine that twined above the doorway.

TOM TIEDE

Now is the time for all good men..

WASHINGTON — When Zachary Taylor was elected President to succeed James K. Polk the inauguration day in 1849 fell on Sunday. Taylor refused to take office on the Sabbath and so Congress was forced to elect an interim President for a day. A man named David Rice Atchison was named — and you could look it up.

As today's Congress prepares to debate impeachment, and as the American people hopefully prepare to eavesdrop, Atchison's historical footnote comes to memory. The story is that the events then were so hectic that he went to bed Saturday evening, bone-weary, asking not to be disturbed for any reason. His order was followed. He was not awakened until the following Monday. Thus President Atchison slept through his entire term of office.

In retrospect, it was of little consequence that citizen Atchison slumbered past his responsibility. The biggest thing happening in those days of America was the discovery of the hot air balloon. But now, more than a century later, in times of Constitutional, Presidential and governmental crises, the responsibilities of U.S. citizens seem more acute. Anyone who sleeps through the impeachment debate, that is, ignores it, is failing his nation and himself.

The framers of the Constitution did not intend for the public to be left entirely out of the impeachment process. True, they rejected the idea of a plebiscite in deciding an accused President's fate. Alexander Hamilton argued strongly in the 71st Federalist that a fixed term of office should not be threatened by "every sudden breeze of passion" in the population. But had the founding fathers wished total public exclusion from the question, they would have written impeachment as a criminal trial whereby a single body of peers, Congress, would deliberate without outside interference.

As it was, of course, the framers decided that impeachment should be merely quasi-legal and decidedly political. Thus they reasoned the people would respond to the process the same as they should any congressional business — positively and negatively.

Philip Kurland, a law professor at the University of Chicago and one of America's preeminent Constitutional authorities, puts it this way: "I don't believe we should expect legislators to be forced one way or another by their constituencies, but I do feel it proper for them to take constituency opinion into consideration."

There are, naturally, risks involved in an impeachment debate which includes public opinion. Kurland points out that impeachment is not a popularity contest, "that should be irrelevant," but worries that "stimulated correspondence" (mass mail campaigns) are bound to develop. Thus the sophisticated legislator should not — but may — be impressed by a colleague entering a "Petition of One Million" or some such into the record.

Similarly, adds Kurland, home district partisans are likely to form vicious block-vote groups which will threaten, and perhaps sway, congressional opinion their way.

But such is the stuff of democracy: lobbies. If industry is entitled to argue in Congress on tax laws, people may argue however they will on impeachment. Keep in mind that public pressure will not in anyway limit President Richard M. Nixon's legal rights, for, as Constitutional interpreter Joseph Story has written: "Impeachment is not so much designed to punish an offender, as to secure the state; it touches neither (a President's) person nor his property, but simply divests him of his political capacity." And so everything and anything is applicable in deciding the fitness of leadership.

It may be said that impeachment is too important to be left to the impeachers. Thus at this crucial dogleg of history, citizens must serve as a Greek chorus in the drama. Offstage, but still part of the act. Read the evidence. Hear the debates. And when you've made your personal decision, let your Congress and your President, know.

Even gets a kick out of her job

She's not just 'horsin' around,' she's real smithy

"Under the Spreading Chestnut tree
"The village smithy stands;
"The smith a mighty man is he
"with large and sinewy hands."
—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow

CHICAGO (UPI) — The 5-foot-5 120-pound woman musters her strength and lugs a 175-pound anvil across her garage. She forges a fire.

She wrestles with the business end of nervous, temperamental horses.

People say it's man's work, but 27-year-old Sandy Klopp shrugs it off. She heats a steel bar until it's white hot, then hammers it into a "u" that will make a perfect fit.

Some days, she shoes as many as 10 horses—including the mean ones that have broken every finger on her heavily calloused hands and kick her.

"It's what I want to do. I love it," Miss Klopp said. She is a country girl from Monee, Ill., who became a licensed horse shoe two years ago.

"I suppose I could be called a blacksmith, but really I'm a farrier (a person who shoes horses). I would say I'm just about equal to the men as far as my customers go. They don't hold it against me because I'm a woman.

"I think they wonder if I can do it. Then, when they see me get the job done, they're always happy. I've never had any gripes," she said.

Horses occasionally rare up and come down across her back, she said, and "you can pray to God if you're still alive to talk about it."

Sandy Klopp just comes back for more, and treats the horses more tenderly than ever.

"I can go in and talk to horses and shoe 'em where a man can't go near them," she said. "Horses are made mean by men because men have no patience."

Miss Klopp learned the trade from the late Ed Johnson, who taught her in a horse shoeing class at Kankakee, Ill. Community College five years ago. He made her his apprentice. Johnson died in late June at age 63 after 25 years of horse shoeing.

"Some people want to be a doctor," she said. "Horse shoeing has the same attraction for me. It's an art in itself, and there aren't very many horseshoers left around.

In Illinois there are 300,000 horses and probably only 250 licensed horse shoers, she said.

That means more than enough business for Miss Klopp and a chance to meet people. A year ago, while she shoeed several horses on a farm near Frankfort, Ill., she met Fred Hartmann. They'll be married in October.

Ford unveils luxury model '75 compact

DETROIT (UPI) — The Mercury Monarch is one of the two new luxury compacts that Ford executives don't mind seeing compared with one of Europe's most expensive cars.

With a prediction that Monarch will set a first-year sales record for Lincoln Mercury, General Manager William P. Benton admitted there was a temptation to take the German-built Mercedes head-on—at about half the price, of course.

Benton predicted sales of the Monarch would benefit from an upswing in the market in 1975 and there should be between 130,000 and 140,000 sold because of a broad appeal to both big and small-car buyers. It will go on public sales Sept. 27 with the rest of the Ford lineup.

Benton said he expects Monarch, on a wheelbase only one inch longer than the Mercedes 280, will not take away sales from his division's bigger and smaller models, but from the biggest owner field in the market—the Pontiac, Buick and Oldsmobile owners.

In an interview prior to today's national press preview for Ford Motor Co.'s 1975 models, Benton said the comparison with Mercedes came up during consumer research clinics last year.

"When we were doing the research, a full third of the people voluntarily said—when asked what kind of car that is—that it was a new Mercedes," Benton said. "Another full third said they didn't know what but said there's no other car like that in America."

"We were knocking around the idea of taking Mercedes head-on in our advertising, but there won't be any reference in our ads," Benton said, adding "but it's not because we're afraid to take them on."

Farm share of consumer dollar drops

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Agriculture Department's latest report on the gap between farm prices and the prices consumers pay for food in supermarkets indicates the farmer's share of the consumer food dollar dropped in June to the lowest level in 27 months.

Economists calculated the farm share of the retail food dollar in June at 39.3 cents, lowest since the 38.6 cent average in March, 1972.

The figures show that a sharp downturn in farm prices during the spring and early summer, accompanied by continued increases in middlemen's margins, has at least temporarily wiped out the 1973 and early 1974 bulge that pushed the farm share of the food dollar back to levels which had not been seen since shortly after World War II.

From 1963 through 1972, government records show, the farm share fluctuated between 37 and 41 cents. In 1971, farmers got 38 cents out of each consumer dollar spent on farm foods. In 1972, it was 40 cents.

In 1973, however, the farm share shot up to 46 cents because farm prices rose faster than middlemen's charges for processing, handling and retailing foods. At one point last summer, when farm prices leaped to an all-time high while marketing charges lagged, the farm share rose to 52 cents.

The 52-cent level recorded last August was the highest since the late 1940's when farmers averaged 50 cents of the consumer food dollar from 1947 through 1949.

The 1975 Mercury Monarch, one of the two new luxury compacts being introduced for next year by Ford Motor Co., is offered in two and four-door models. Standard equipment includes steel-belted, radial-ply tires, solid state ignition, reclining bucket seats and carpeting. The Monarch also features a six-cylinder 250-cubic-inch engine and a manual three-speed transmission. It will go on sale September 27.

Americans help Greek children

ATHENS, (UPI) — An organization set up during the American depression to help the children of the poverty-stricken Appalachian area helps poor Greek communities to improve the lives of their youths.

The Save the Children Federation (SCF), an organization established in 1932 to help American children, aids children and communities in 16 countries.

Unlike other national or international organizations bent on extending help to needy individuals, the SCF tries to eliminate the conditions causing poverty.

"In attacking the roots of poverty, we avoid charity and promote self-reliance," said Mrs. Theodora Pantou who has directed the SCF branch office in Greece since 1947.

"Last year we started a new program of assisting whole communities, not just some favored families," Mrs. Pantou said. "We believe that if the community benefits, the children benefit also."

"According to this new program, called High Impact Program, the Greek SCF carefully chooses a village or an urban slum in need of financial and social development. We then select a number of at least 150 children living there. Each American donor sponsors one of these children, sending a cheque of $100 a year to the Federation in the child's name."

The child corresponds with its sponsor, but does not receive any money directly. Instead, a citizens committee, elected by members of the assisted community among themselves, handles the federation funds and spends or invests them as it thinks best for the community and especially the children.

This program is now active in three Greek communities—the villages of Zaros in Crete, Prodromos near Thebes, and Agios Yannis Theologos, an urban slum north of Athens.

"Agios Yannis Theologos has 4,000 inhabitants, mostly workers who moved to Athens from all parts of the country in the last 12 years," said Christo Papadopoulos, a social worker attached to the project. "All houses are illegally built, one third of them lacks electricity and none has running water. Some families live in dilapidated buses."

"There are no shops, no street lights, no church, no secondary school, not even a cinema. There is no playground or day-care center to look after children of working mothers."

Christos Bozantidis, president of the citizens' committee, said its first concern was to build a second primary school and to fully equip the existing one.

"We got a loan from SCF and built the new school. We whitewashed it, installed the plumbing and stove pipes and repaired by ourselves the second-hand desks we were given," Bostantidis said. "We have also put aside a sum of money for a small water-supply system and for a playground. Another sum is being used for emergency medical care of the very need."

In the courtyard and unused cells of an old monastery in the area of Agios Yannis Theologos, social workers of SCF provide educational and recreational activities for the children of the community.

A 10-year-old pupil, Helen Christodoulou, said that social workers help the children with their school lessons and teach them English.

"We also play games, have painting competitions and we have a children's lending library," Helen said. "This winter we had two picnics in Attica and saw a play for children in an Athens theater."

None of us had ever been to the theater before."

Agios Yannis Theologos youths also have formed a club where they can get together and talk, play records, read and have a cup of coffee or a soft drink.

Dr. William Laikos, from Roswell, N.M., came with his wife to Greece for the first time recently and visited 10-year-old Kyriaki Bazaka, his sponsored child in Agios Yannis Theologos.

Eskimos hold games

FAIRBANKS, Alaska (UPI) — A 5-foot-4 Eskimo took top honors during the weekend at the 1974 world Eskimo-Indian Olympics that featured competitions such as the blanket toss, high kick, knuckle hop and drop-the-bomb.

Reggie Joule, 22, of Kotzebue, an Eskimo village just north of the Arctic Circle, placed first in three events to easily outdistance 80 other athletes in the Olympics.

Joule bounced two stories to the top of the University of Alaska gymnasium as two dozen athletes pulled a seal skin taut. The game is a variation on a hunting method for spotting game.

Joule wasn't able to stand flat-footed and touch the dangling target in the high kick events. But with a slight run, he flipped up and touched the marker with both feet at feet, 9 inches and with one foot at 7 feet, 5 1/2 inches.

James Killbear, an engineer from Barter Island in the Arctic Ocean, won the knuckle hop when he managed a record 88 feet, 10 inches hopping on his knuckles and toes before he dropped to the ground and a medic bandaged his bleeding hands.

Walter Neuman, a heavy equipment operator from Arctic Village, held his arms and legs stiff as four men carried him 263 feet in an unusual game called drop-the-bomb. It is named for the collapse that ends the game when the competitor loses strength in his limbs.

Dodgers build lead

ATLANTA (UPI) — Los Angeles Dodger Manager Walter Alston thinks sports writers pay more attention to pressure than ball players do.

After his team snapped a three-game losing streak by trouncing Atlanta 10-2 Monday night, Alston was asked if the Dodgers had felt any special pressure before the contest.

"I think there is always pressure when you lose two-three games in a row," the Los Angeles boss said. "But I think you folks talk about more pressure than the players really feel. I think once the ballgame starts, the players don't feel too much, except about what's going on."

"When we've had our pennant-winning teams, only once did we have a big lead. The others went right down to the end. So I can't get all excited here in mid-season about losing three in a row."

The Dodgers have lost three in a row five times this year but never have lost four straight.

"We've come back each time with good games—big wins. It's happened four times this season," Alston said.

Alston indicated no excitement but the win was especially sweet for the Dodgers because Cincinnati, the second-place team in the West Division race, lost. That gave Los Angeles a 4 1/2 game bulge.

Don Sutton survived a shaky start and pitched a complete game. It was his second consecutive win after starting 14 times without getting a victory.

"But how about my hitting?" Sutton shouted after the game. He had three singles, scored a run and drove in a run.

The Dodgers smacked 17 hits off three Braves pitchers, with Jimmy Wynn doing the most damage. Wynn hit a two-run homer in the third, his 24th, singled in another run in the fifth and belted a sacrifice fly in the sixth.

Although the Dodgers have been slumping, Wynn now has knocked in 15 runs in his last 15 games.

Dave Lopes had three hits, including a homer, to extend his hitting streak to 11 games. Others with three hits each were Bill Buckner, Steve Garvey and Willie Crawford.

For Atlanta, it was the first loss in four games under new manager Clyde King. Ralph Garr went 4-for-5 and increased his league-leading batting average to .368.

The Dodgers are back in California tonight to open a two-game series at San Diego. Lefthander Doug Rau (9-6) is slated to pitch tonight against the Padres' Randy Jones (7-13).

Los Angeles returns home to Dodger Stadium Thursday for a seven-game home stand featuring the Padres, Houston and Cincinnati.

Vinci facing toughest job

Andy Vinci, Cal Poly's aggressive football coach, will soon have to live up to his words.

Since taking the Bronco job in a desperate attempt by the university administration to build up its football program, Vinci has been busy recruiting players and selling Poly football to the fans of the valley.

Vinci came to Pomona with a reputation as a man who can build up sick football programs, both on the field and financially. He proved it at the University of San Diego.

He has a great speaking ability and knows how to use it to his best advantage. It's hard to say no when Vinci or one of his staff tries to talk somebody into something.

Vinci has been promising big things for Cal Poly football. He and his staff have been selling the area merchants like no one has before in order to have the necessary financial support.

Now it is time for Vinci to show Pomona what he has. His team reports for practice on August 18 to prepare for a tough season opener at Fresno State on Sept. 7.

"Fresno is where we hope to take our first step forward which will make our dream come true," Vinci said in referring to his goal of a California Collegiate Athletic Association title and a post-season bowl game.

While Vinci is excited about the number of top-notch junior college transfers on his club, he also admits the recruiting wasn't as successful as he wished because of all the time spent getting financial help.

"We've worked so hard on financial problems that we really didn't recruit as well as we should have," Vinci explained. "This is not to say we're not going to be successful on the gridiron; we are. It is just that the financial worries have made our job harder."

Vinci claims to have raised more than $150,000 since his arrival in Pomona.

Other donations

"We've just about reached our total goals," he said. "Let's not kid ourselves. It's not all real cash. Some people have given us other donations than money. To them it wasn't cash, to us it is."

Probably the most unusual donation was 40 head of cattle, which will pay for the football team's food bill for one year.

Other key donations are housing for players.

"We couldn't house a football team on our campus," the coach said. "It's just too expensive. What we've done is gone to area hotels, motels, and apartments and found housing for the players. While this isn't actual cash it's worth more than money to us."

As far as actual cash is concerned, Poly has raised money by selling memberships in the Gold Cap Club, President's Council and Century Club.

The big fund raiser was the Spring Wind Up Dinner which raised more than $8,000.

Another big plus for Poly is the three-year contract with radio station KSOM of Ontario, which will net more than $15,000 to the program.

Sports information director John Watkins is also planning a 90-page program, which will be loaded with advertising.

Seating at Kellogg Field will be raised from 2,500 to 9,000. Poly has great hopes of filling every seat for the big Oct. 12 game against archrival Cal Poly San Luis Obispo, the CCAA football king.

Vinci has done his job selling Poly. Now he faces a tougher task. Poly's schedule is rough. It won't be as easy talking the opposition into donations.

Because of Vinci's reputation, most of Poly opponents will be ready more than ever. Poly is no longer a push-over.

Luncheon 'off' due to strike

Thursday's scheduled football luncheon to honor the Denver Broncos has been cancelled, it was announced this morning by Brent Hunter, communications assistant of the sponsoring Pomona Chamber of Commerce.

Hunter said the Chamber is calling off the luncheon with regrets because of the National Football League players' strike, which prevents any veteran players from attending.

The luncheon was planned to honor the Broncos, who are currently training at Cal Poly. It was scheduled at Kellogg Valley Inn.

There's hope strike may be settled

By United Press International

Striking National Football League players will focus their attention on Washington today, hoping they can soon drop their picket signs and get down to the business of playing football.

For the first time in 11 days, representatives of the Players Association will meet with management in hopes of ending the 30-day-old strike which has left more than 1,000 veterans outside the training camps and has reduced most clubs to rosters of unknowns.

Chief Federal Mediator W.J. Usery Jr. was to meet with the bargainers from the NFL Owners Management Council at 10 a.m. EDT today and then with both the owners and players at 2 p.m.

Usery, the government's chief labor mediator, met for 90 minutes with a bargaining team from the Players Association Monday and was optimistic that a settlement might be reached.

"I'd be very hopeful that both sides are ready now to enter into serious bargaining," he said. "There comes a time in every strike to get it over with and I hope on this strike that time is soon."

Bill Curry, the Houston center who is president of the players union, also thought progress might be made in the new round of talks with Usery.

"We sincerely believe that at this time an agreement can be reached," he said.

Ed Garvey, executive director of the players' union, said the union's demands would be scaled down somewhat to help negotiations but he indicated that the controversial "freedom demands" would be modified but not abandoned.

These focus on players' insistence of having some say on which team they play with once a contract expires and veto power for veterans over trades.

Veterans, most of them second-line players, continued to drift into camps as the strike neared the one-month mark. At last report, there were 236 players classified as veterans in the camps while over 1,200 were honoring the picket lines. Of the 236, less than 60 were considered starters.

In Detroit, the Lions named Rick Forzano, former head coach at Navy, to replace the late Don McCafferty as interim coach. McCafferty died of a heart attack at the age of 53 Monday while working in his garden.

"I don't want congratulations," the 45-year-old Forzano said. "This comes at a very sad time in my life. Don McCafferty was a great person. I'll miss him. It's still a shock to us."

General Manager Russ Thomas passed over two other assistants, Ed Khayat and Bob Hollway, both of whom served previously as head coaches.

Striking Lion players also allowed quarterback Greg Landry to return to camp although he will not play in any preseason games.

"We let Landry go in," said Lion Player Rep Ed Flanagan. "We let him in to help Forzano organize the offense. But we have his commitment he won't play in any exhibition games."

The players' weakest spot has been Cincinnati, where guard John Shinnors Monday became the 26th veteran to report.

"The dumb ones are going in now," said Player Rep Pat Matson. "They're giving the flimsiest excuses for reporting, saying they need to get into shape when they're already in shape. Going in now just gives the owners an edge in the negotiations. They're going to be harder to talk to because some players keep coming in."

"I'm angry. I'm frustrated—a bit of both. I made a commitment. I intend to see it through and I think the others should too."

Elsewhere, seven Pittsburgh Steelers—all reserves—reported and starting quarterback Jerry Tagge went into the Green Bay camp. The Packers traded away Tagge's major competitor — Scott Hunter — to Buffalo Monday for running back Pete Van Valkenberg and defensive lineman Steve Okoniewski.

Running backs Mike Adamle and Hank Bjorklund checked into the New York Jets' camp and wide receiver Preston Riley reported to Atlanta's training site. Four reserves also reported to the Los Angeles Rams.

Ryan not happy with his season

ANAHEIM (UPI) — Nolan Ryan sums up the first four months of his third season as a California Angel tersely.

"I'm terribly disappointed," the fireballing righthander said with a frown.

Ryan has a 13-10 record and a 3.48 ERA on a club that is mired in the cellar in the American League West and doesn't have much chance of getting out.

"I haven't thrown well this year but I don't feel it's a lost season yet. I'd like to win 20 and I'd like to get my ERA down to a respectable figure."

A year ago, the ex-New York Met had a 21-16 mark and a 2.87 ERA. In his two years as an Angel, he has led the majors in strikeouts, breaking Sandy Koufax's big league record set in 1965 with 383 last season.

He also pitched a pair of no-hitters in '73.

He was given a raise in salary from $44,000 to $100,000 this year.

In 326 innings pitched last season, Ryan walked 162 batters. In 200 innings this year, he has given up 132 walks.

"I wasn't ready for the season when spring training ended," he noted. "When the season started, I tried to get ready too fast and overthrew."

"I developed a lot of bad habits and I just haven't had a consistent rhythm."

The Angels' lackluster season hasn't helped Ryan's mental approach either, he said.

"It's hurt," he declared. "It's very unsettling to have people coming and going. It hasn't been much fun this year. When the team goes like it has been, it's naturally a job coming to the park to do your work."

"It's bound to affect your work and that, in turn, hurts your earning power."

Ryan doesn't think California's future is too bright either. According to him, general manager Harry Dalton and Dick Williams, Bobby Winkles' replacement as the club's manager, have more than their work cut out for them.

"Our future is distant," he said. "It's going to be a couple of years before we're contenders."

"I look at it this way. I don't know who they can deal without weakening the club. You can't pick up established veterans with unproven youth. That's the situation this club is in."

Ryan was asked his thoughts about his new manager.

"I can't complain," he said. "He's treated me all right."

Two weeks ago, Ryan was critical of Williams for giving him more than three days rest between starts. And Williams left Ryan off the American League All-Star team last season despite the Texan's no-hit heroics.

Ryan, who picked up his 13th victory Sunday in his first relief performance of the season, will take the mound tonight against Jim Kaat (11-7) in the opener of a two-game series against the Chicago White Sox.

The Angels, who had lost 15 consecutive home games before winning Sunday's second game of a doubleheader against Minnesota, will close their home stand Wednesday in a 6 p.m. contest against Chicago.

Former Poly star Surina signs Broncos' contract

The NFL Denver Broncos have signed former Cal Poly quarterback Jack Surina.

Surina, who has been working out with the Broncos, joins John Huftagle and Bob Biggs as Denver signal callers. The Denver roster now numbers 47 players.

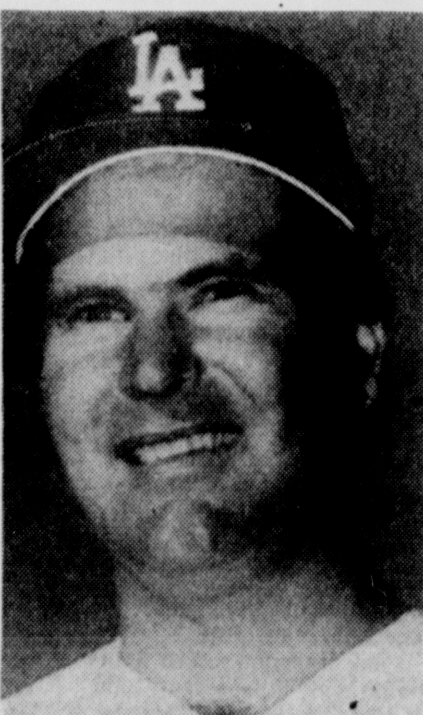

The 6-2, 205-pound Surina was an All-San Antonio League quarterback in Chino High School. Upon graduation, he attended the University of California at Berkeley for a year and then returned to the valley to play at Chaffey College.

Surina played his last two years of college ball at Cal Poly where he set one season and two career records. In 1971 Surina completed 144 of 305 passes for 1893 yards and 16 touchdowns.

He also ran for 107 yards to account for an even 2000 yards gained passing and running. These accomplishments earned him All-CCAA recognition. He was also named second team All-Pacific Coast small college and honorable mention small college All-American.

At the time of graduation in 1972, Surina held school records for the most passes attempted (305) and completed (144) in a single season and the career record for most total plays (726).

tractions and travel — no longer seemed like a good idea. He wanted to spend the two years with his wife.

Bobbie, however, insisted she wanted him to remain in the game, that nothing should be changed because of her condition. The doctors to whom Ken talked also said that the best thing for her was just to continue life normally, that there was no sense upsetting Ryan and Kenna, who knew vaguely their daddy was often away playing a game.

There was, however, a complicating factor. Bobbie was pregnant. To fight her malignancy, the normal procedure was to induce radium and cobalt treatments. But these would surely have aborted the unborn child or inflicted serious damage. Bobbie and Ken decided jointly that she would not have the treatments.

It was a difficult decision," said Ken in retrospect. "We're not Catholic or anything like that. The doctors said at the time it wouldn't make much difference in her condition. For a long time, even after the baby was born, Bobbie felt fine. Until she started getting pains

Money market fund debts

By ROGER SPEAR

Q — I recently retired and have most of my money in Fidelity Capital Fund, now worth about $8,000. I had hoped it would grow sufficiently so that I could supplement my Social Security by a withdrawal plan. What would you advise me to do? — I.Y.

A — Fidelity has come with a new "fund" called Fidelity Daily Income Trust which seems to be a good solution to your problem. This is a short-term money market vehicle designed to provide maximum income consistent with safety by investing and trading in government and agency debt obligations, CDs and banker's acceptances, prime commercial paper and short-term corporate notes. As a shareholder in a Fidelity Fund you have the right to exchange at net asset value into this no-load trust and back again into another Fidelity fund without paying a load fee.

FDIT, as the new "fund" is termed, will accrue interest daily to shareholders' accounts and this will be credited monthly in additional shares. A quarterly withdrawal plan is provided for accounts of 5,000 to 10,000 shares — each share has a $1.00 net asset value. Since FDIT is a highly liquid investment you may readily move back into another Fidelity Fund should interest rates recede sharply or market recovery gain momentum. Meanwhile you will be earning a generous return on your capital.

Q — I have just finished reading the quarterly shareholders' report for Burlington Northern (NYSE) and see their earnings have doubled. If the whole year is as good, they would earn $8.00 per share but all they pay in dividends is $1.50. In spite of Burlington's good earnings the shares dropped about 10 points in May. Why? — J.M.

A — A 10 per cent rate freight increase which had been requested by the rails was denied by the ICC causing price weakness industry-wide. A subsequent reversal of the decision by that regulatory agency likewise reversed the downward price action of the group. As for Burlington's dividend, management has stated that directors will discuss increasing the rate in July. Hold.

Q — My mother has recently received $80,000 from my father's various life insurance policies. This plus her house represent her entire assets. How should this money be invested and what might she expect as a return on the investment? — T.B.

A — Citicorp (holding company for First National City Bank) has unveiled an innovative investment vehicle which has considerable appeal in your mother's situation. This $850 million issue of 15-year "floating-rate notes" is guaranteed to pay interest at a 9.7 per cent annual rate through November 30, 1974 and thereafter yield 1 per cent more than the 3-week average rate for 3-month Treasury bills. Thus, the rate will fluctuate with changes in short-term interest rates. Although the notes will be available in $5,000 minimum amounts, trading on them in $1,000 units will begin soon on the New York Stock Exchange.

Unlike most publicly traded debt securities, holders will be able to redeem these notes at face value on any of the semi-annual interest dates.

Gamble on free parking scheme not so fantastic

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (UPI) — Fantastic Gamble took a gamble and ended up with a three-year prison term for mail fraud Wednesday.

Gamble was convicted in federal court of mailing fraudulent letters to professional persons offering to sell parking passes to park anywhere downtown for $4.

Several persons testified they thought Gamble had "a good idea," but he failed to check it out with city officials first and lacked authority to grant free parking.

Gamble said he adopted the nickname "Fantastic" to show what kind of businessman he was. He was born Charles Conrad Gamble in Chicago, where he has also served time for fraud and for giving false statements to the government.

Aman Folk Ensemble to play at Redlands

The Aman Folk Ensemble, specialists in Balkan dancing, will perform in the Redlands Bowl at 8:15 p.m. Friday. Admission is by free will offering.

The program includes a stock dance; the dance of the voluminous skirts from India; a Transcaucasian suite beginning with a step done under a silk canopy; and a suite from the American Appalachians.

Musicians accompanying the dancers use a variety of rare instruments, adding to the authenticity of the performance.

Costumes, when possible, were purchased from people in the villages where the dances originate, or were donated by governments in recognition of the excellence of Aman reproductions of their national dances.

"Aman" means "happiness," "peace," "joy," or "shalom" in most of the languages of the region covered by these dances.

The troupe of 100, directed by Anthony Shay and Leona Wood, has appeared at the Pavilion and the Ahmanson Theater of the Los Angeles Music Center. It is closely connected with UCLA where it rehearses.

The next program will be Francoise Regnat, a young French pianist, next Tuesday.

Year-round season

Frogs may be hunted the year round in Florida.

COLORFUL COSTUME—Rosamaria Gonzales models one of the authentic costumes from Veracruz, Mexico, that lend color to the Padua Hills Theater production of "Tropical Veracruz." The Mexican folk musical opens at the theater in Claremont at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday. Reservations can be made at 626-1288.

Musical to open at Padua Hills

"Tropical Veracruz," a Caribbean carnival of song and dance, will open at Padua Hills Theater, Claremont, at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Brilliant ruffled skirts whirl to the beat of the "Bomba" and young men flirt with their dancing partners in this colorful, authentic play with the music and dances of Veracruz, Mexico. Exotic, gigantic masked carnival figures are added for atmosphere.

"Tropical Veracruz" will run through Sept. 14, each performance will be followed by an outdoor fiesta on the theater grounds. The fiesta, "Jamaica," provides opportunity for the audience to meet the Mexican Players, watch entertainment and enjoy the traditional snacks of Mexico.

Curtain rises on "Tropical Veracruz" at 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays through Saturdays with matinees at 2:30 on Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays.

The Mexican Players also entertain in the adjacent Padua dining room during luncheon and dinner. A choice of Mexican and American dishes is available at times.

Claremont Music Festival

Giora Bernstein conducts all-Stravinsky program

By RALPH PIERCE

For the last of the orchestral concerts of the Claremont Music Festival, Giora Bernstein led his group of young musicians in a program made up of music of Igor Stravinsky in Bridges Hall, Pomona College, Friday night.

With the exception of the familiar "Firebird" Suite the program was made up of works seldom heard. Stravinsky was known for his interest in music of some of the Renaissance composers as well as those who wrote later which accounts for the opening work "Monumentum pro Gesualdo de Venosa." This is a Stravinsky orchestration of three motets of the old Venetian prince, Don Carlo Gesualdo. The music was very forward looking even in its own time and Stravinsky captured all of the subtleties in his orchestration which presented the music in a much larger form than the original.

The second work presented the evening's solisit. Claudine Carlson, in two lieder by Hugo Wolf in which the piano part was arranged by Stravinsky for a small group of instruments. They are beautiful songs and it could probably be argued as to whether Stravinsky's orchestration improved or detracted from the original works. Miss Carlson sang with her usual rich voice which brought out the beauty of the music and blended wit the instrumental accompaniment. Her German diction left something to be desired if you are a listener who has heard them sung by some of the European singers.

The third work on the program also presented Miss Carlson in a very early work of the composer, composed in 1906. In this sort of song cycle, "Le Faune et la Bergere" one could hear sounds reminiscent of Debussy, Wagner and many of the composers of that period, and you would probably never have guessed that it was a composition of Stravinsky. It was a piece one enjoyed hearing and well performed by Miss Carlson in the original Russian text against a large and colorful orchestral background.

The concluding "Firebird" suite gave the young players still another opportunity to show what they have accomplished during their summer studies. The performance was truly a brilliant one in which each section of the orchestra had ample opportunity to show its virtuosity. An enthusiastic ovation from the large audience should have assured the conductor and the players that their work was appreciated, and one can only wonder what they can come up with next summer to top this very successful festival.

DYNAMIC DUO—Loggins and Messina, popular vocal pair, will perform at the Universal Studios Amphitheater at 8:15 p.m. Monday through Aug. 7 and Aug. 9 and 10. They will be backed by a six-man band and have Canadian songstress Anne Murray as guest star. Loggins and Messina have produced three gold albums in their two years together.

Free concert scheduled at De Anza Park

The Sixth Finger Funk, eight-man group specializing in "the Latin sound," will present a free concert at Jagard Bowl in Ontario's De Anza Park at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday.

The program is sponsored by the Ontario Recreation Division. Keith Calvert is special events coordinator.

The Sixth Finger Funk is made up of Freddie Olivas, Curt Schmitt, Max Prieto, Rob Bohannon, Martin Pimentel, Johnny Velasquez, Alan Anderson and Marty Baum.

NANCY WILSON, singer and TV personality, will perform on KMP C's fifth annual "Show of the World," a benefit for the Permanent Charities Committee of the Entertainment Industries.

The multiplier effect and its $500 million impact.

In its study of Kaiser Steel, Urbanomics Research Associates put a dollar and cents figure on what our Fontana plants mean to the local economy. Not including the iron ore mine in Riverside County or the plants in Los Angeles, we spend about $270 million a year. This "primary spending"—for payroll, new construction, materials and supplies, taxes—goes directly into the area's economy. But it doesn't stop there.

The multiplier effect, which applies to all basic industry, takes over. For instance, the study shows that every job at our steel mill creates two additional jobs in Valley communities—grocers, teachers, bankers, store owners, repairmen—25,000 jobs in all. And when our people spend or invest their $92 million payroll, it generates additional household income for people not at all connected with steelmaking.

Using the multiplier effect, the study concludes that the annual primary spending of Kaiser Steel ultimately results in over $500 million income for households and business organizations in Southern California. And most of it stays right here in the Valley.

"When he starts talking about gluttony, I say he has stopped preaching and gone to meddling!"

Japan's pro-U.S. party tottering

TOKYO (UPI) — Japan is America's only strong ally in Asia, but the alliance now depends on a crumbling political party supported by less than half the Japanese people.

For the last 22 years the U.S. Government's big friend in Japan has been the ruling Liberal-Democratic Party. It is anti-Communist, business oriented, and usually ready to cooperate with Washington's policies in Asia.

The LDP has won all the elections for Parliament since 1952, and its leaders have run the country. They let the Pentagon keep 60,000 American troops on Japanese soil, and base the U.S. 7th Fleet at Yokosuka on Tokyo Bay.

They provide a business climate that has drawn more than $2 billion into American investments in Japan, and fostered the largest overseas trade between any two countries in the world.

President Nixon numbers two former LDP prime ministers, Nobusuke Kishi and Eisaku Sato, among his friends.

Now Uncle Sam no longer is in a position to take the LDP — and Japan — for granted. The party's strength in the Diet (parliament) and its voter support are slipping.

Before the end of the 1970s it could well be replaced by a coalition of opposition parties dedicated to ending—or at least whittling down—Japan's partnership with the United States.

The Japanese voters desertion of LDP has been going on steadily for years. In the general election for Parliament in 1960, the party was backed by 57.5 per cent of the electorate.

In voting July 7 for the largely ceremonial upper house of Parliament, LDP candidates were able to win only 44.34 per cent of the votes cast. The party lost seven seats, and its majority fell to one.

In the 491-seat lower house—the one that really counts—LDP was able to win a 25-seat majority in the last election in 1972. But that was a big reduction from its majorities in the past. There is little optimism at LDP headquarters about the next lower house election, which must take place before the end of 1976.

These setbacks come despite the fact that LDP, whose bills are paid by Japan's big corporations, has far more money to spend than any other party.

It might well have been ousted before this by four opposition parties, had they been able to drop their mutual quarreling and agree on a common strategy.

The Socialist and Communist parties are Marxist, opposed to the whole American role in Asia. They want a socialist Japan. The other two, Komei and Democratic Socialist, are reformers rather than revolutionaries. But their long range goal is a neutral Japan, not tied to any of the great powers.

There are no signs that the United States has worked out any alternative to relying on the LDP. In all of non-Communist Asia, American policy tends to paint itself into a corner by over-reliance on close ties with the people at the top.

The large staff at the U.S. Embassy in Tokyo and its translation department supplies torrents of information on Japanese intellectual and political trends to Washington, but how much of it filters up to the top is hard to tell.

U.S. policy makers were caught flat footed on the 1940s riots against the U.S. Japan Security Treaty. They certainly miscalculated the Japanese reaction to Nixon's secret diplomacy with China.

China isn't an issue anybody in Japan except a few editorial writers for Tokyo newspapers," a high embassy official told newsmen a briefing shortly before the secretary of State Henry Kissinger's first visit to China in 1971. By mid-1972 Japan had recognized China and cut diplomatic ties with Taiwan.

New winds are blowing through Tokyo today. Japanese people have sunbathed Uncle Sam a number of times in the post war era. And if not listened to the world could surprise him pleasantly again.

Now look at today's hand. South will duck the first heart lead and win the second one in dummy. Then, if South is at all careless he will lead a diamond. After all, he has to knock out the diamond ace in order to take his four diamond tricks. East will take his ace and knock out South's ace of hearts. Sooner or later South will have to take the club finesse for his ninth trick. The finesse will lose and West will take two heart tricks to set South.

An expert South will look for nine tricks at the start of play and see that two clubs will be needed. He will lose the club finesse right away. He will lose the ace of diamonds trick later, but there will be no way for East to put West in to take those heart tricks.

Suppose West holds both the king of clubs and ace of diamonds. Expert South will go down just like everyone else.

Vickie Dodd is wed in Bethany Chapel

Miss Vickie Dodd and Carl McMurtry were married at the Bethany Chapel of La Verne.

Miss Dodd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Swen of Montclair, was given in marriage by her father. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Nash of Ontario.

For the double-ring service, the bride selected a floor-length white nylon gown with a high neckline, empire bodice and long sleeves. She carried a cascade of white carnations, blue daisies, baby's breath and fern. A cap of lace and seed pearls held the bride's elbow-length veil.

Miss Teresa Brock was maid of honor and Miss Mary Kay Berg was the bridesmaid.

A cousin of the groom, Jim Nash, was best man while Randy Thomas was usher.

Miss Debra Swen, cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the Pomona American Legion Hall.

The newlyweds will reside in Victorville where the groom is stationed with the Air Force.

Among the out-of-town guests were the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Hopper of Selma and her aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. William Hopper of Port Angeles, Wash.

Folklife festival a hit at Spokane's Expo '74

SPOKANE, Wash. (UPI) — Way off in the corner of the Expo '74 site, gold panners pan, shipbuilders build, Indian dancers dance and a multitude of artisans carve, sew, forge and cook.

It's all part of an ambitious effort known as the Folklife Festival—the only real "people" exhibit at this city's world exposition on the environment.

The exhibit is patterned after the Smithsonian Institution's two-week Folklife Festival staged every summer in Washington, D.C.

Two key elements of the Expo folk festival are traditional American heritage and ethnic groups of the Northwest.

Between them, they provide fairgoers with everything from logging demonstrations and gold panning to Scandinavian fiddling and Japanese kitemaking.

The four-acre site includes a small amphitheater for live entertainment, open-air booths for craftsmen to show their wares, traditional Indian longhouses, a boatbuilding house where a 28-foot sloop is under construction and a sluice where anyone can try his hand at panning for gold nuggets.

The man behind the Expo Folklife Festival is Bob Glatzer, a New Yorker who came west in 1972 at the direction of the Smithsonian.

Glatzer and a handful of others were commissioned to look into the possibilities of staging a Folklife Festival at Expo for the six-month run of the fair.

"We found that the Northwest was really an untapped gold mine as far as ethnic backgrounds and their diversity of languages and cultures was concerned," he said.

With that discovery, it was full speed ahead, he said, except for a two-month period last fall between the time the Smithsonian pulled out because it considered the project too much to handle and Expo moved in to manage the festival.

The Folklife Festival offers a permanent program including daily logging demonstrations, where visitors are invited to scale a 100-foot pole in true woodsman tradition or bucksaw their way through a three-foot diameter log.

The same area features the boatbuilding house and gold

Nixon says milk better than a sleeping pill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Drinking milk is a better sedative than a sleeping pill.

The testimonial comes not from an advertising man, or from a milk industry spokesman, but from President Nixon.

Nixon's promotional idea is among several musings in the transcript of a March 23, 1971, tape released recently as part of the House Judiciary Committee's evidence. On that day, Nixon was meeting with dairy industry leaders and his staff about price supports for milk.

He also said all cities are corrupt, and when a nation loses its rural heartland "it almost always follows that it loses its character."

And Nixon believes that as Cite driver in freeway crash fatal to two

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A motorist was booked on suspicion of manslaughter Sunday after his car went out of control and somersaulted off the Long Beach Freeway, killing two passengers and critically injuring himself and another person.

Pedro Orozco, 20, the driver, was in critical condition at the County-USC Medical Center jail ward, where he was booked.

Orozco's car veered out of control on the Long Beach Freeway, hit the center divider, then flipped onto an embankment near the Santa Ana Freeway, the California Highway Patrol said.

Passengers Enrique Castaneda Rodriguez, 20, El Sereno, and Sylvia Sandoval, 16, Los Angeles, were killed. An unidentified 19-year-old girl was in critical condition at the medical center.
